Miners Union Orders Green Up for Trial Before Board

Key Unit Backing Lewis Calls on A. F. L. Head to Explain Acts.

Several Units Ask C. I. O. Expulsion

Labor Factional Dispute Moves to Showdown in New Threat.

By Sidney Olson.

Organized labor's two opposing forces, split for months over organization supremacy, moved toward a showdown last night.

The United Mine Workers, keystone of the Committee for Industrial Organization, ordered their ranking member, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to appear before the Mine Workers' executive board and explain activities allegedly "injurious and detrimental" to the union.

Green, noting that the summons insisted on his appearance before the miners' chiefs on November 18, when he will be presiding over the federation's convention in Tampa, Fla., denied "directly and categorically" the mine union's assertions, and pointed to his record as their president for more than 30 years and as federation president for more than 10 years in refutation.

Final Phase of Battle.

The battle between the federation and the C. I. O. thus moved into the final phase as all last-minute peacemaking efforts faded before the solid enmity between Green and John L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers and chairman of the C. I. O.

Other labor developments of the day included:

Heads of several unions, gathering at Tampa, Fla., favored immediate expulsion of the dozen C. I. O. unions from the federation.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, in the C. I. O., decided not to send delegates to the Tampa meeting.

The Third National Conference on Labor Legislation favored, if necessary, a constitutional amendment to permit social reform legislation.

Labor's Nonpartisan League, pro-Roosevelt, announced it would continue active through the 1938 Congressional elections.

Pledge Co-operation.

Maj. George Berry, Sidney Hillman and Lewis, officers of Labor's Nonpartisan League, issued a statement here committing their organization to "the furtherance of liberalism in the United States."

Berry explained that national organization under the league's banner will go on, with especial emphasis on the 1938 Congressional elections in the States, and stressed that the league "adjust itself to any political realignment that occurs."

The International Ladies Garment Workers Union which decided to withhold delegates from the federation's convention was under federation pressure to send delegates, as Green had hoped thus to lure them away from the C. I. O. standard, in the opinion of observers.

Although it was believed the Garment Workers action was a blow to Green, he said yesterday that he believed they "favored a united labor front rather than a division and discord," and that "evidently they saw eye to eye with the federation officers in efforts to settle existing differences through conferences of committees representing the two respective groups."

Constitutional Amendment.

The Third National Conference on Labor Legislation, meanwhile, militantly proposed that if efforts to obtain legislation within the Constitution's framework failed, they would pledge their support to a constitutional amendment allowing Congress to legislate for social reforms.

Other resolutions of the conference, held under auspices of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, and closely watched by the Administration, recommended the 5-day work week and a maximum of 8 hours a day; mandatory minimum wage legislation "to prevent the payment of sweatshop wages;" the establishment of State labor departments, and ratification of the child labor amendment to the Constitution.

Other resolutions urged continued full participation in the International Labor Conference; establishment of a safety laboratory in the Law Insuring Jobless in N. Y. Is Called Illegal

Supreme Court Hears Act Described as 'Pure Confiscation.'

By the Associated Press.

The New York unemployment insurance act, which embodies New Deal principles, was assailed as unconstitutional and constituting "pure confiscation" in arguments yesterday before the Supreme Court.

Opponents will conclude their arguments today, after which Henry Epstein, New York solicitor general, will defend the legislation.

Another case argued yesterday was whether a radio station has the right to broadcast news dispatches as soon as they are published in a newspaper. At issue was an injunction granted the Associated Press by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals to restrain Radio Station KVOS, of Bellingham, Wash., from broadcasting the press association's news until 18 hours after publication.

Wood Attacks Act.

Frederick H. Wood, New York attorney, who aided in upholding the "gold clause" legislation and in upsetting NRA and the Guffey soft coal act, delivered the principal attacks on the State unemployment insurance act.

He was joined by Henry S. Fraser, Syracuse attorney, who asserted the act "places the iron hand of confiscation on one group of persons for the benefit of another group." He contended that represented a "flagrant violation" of the Constitution.

Under the legislation pay rolls of employers are taxed to provide a pool to aid the unemployed. The rate of tax the first year is 1 per cent, 2 the second year, and 3 thereafter.

The measure, upheld by the New York Court of Appeals, was challenged by the Associated Industries of New York State, Inc., and by two Syracuse firms, E. C. Stearns & Co. and W. H. H. Chamberlin, Inc.

Acts Supplementary.

While the State statute and the Federal social security act are supplementary to some extent, Fraser explained the constitutionality of the Federal law is not involved.

Wood contended the responsibility of employers was not such that the entire cost of aiding the unemployed should be placed on them.

He added that the New York act "treats all employers alike and fails to distribute the burden according to the degree of responsibility."

Justice Brandeis was the only member of the court to ask a question during the one and one-half hour argument. He said it had been contended that provision for a reserve fund to maintain purchasing power during a depression would aid in avoiding serious unemployment.

"I think it is conceded," Wood replied, "that this act would be totally inadequate to relieve unemployment so great in extent as

First Chest Drive Report Today Expected to Exceed $400,000

Special Assignment Unit Believed Near This Mark in Solicitations; Street Stresses Need of Private Assistance This Year.

Dollars, which signify bread, clothes and hope for those in need, will be bullets against hunger, cold and anguish today when the bills drop into the coffers of the Community Chest.

At the opening report luncheon of the campaign today at 12:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel, the first measure of the Capital's response to the annual drive will be taken.

Leading the attack on the four "public enemies"—hunger, disease crime and despair—will be the special assignments unit, of which Joseph P. Tumulty is chairman. This unit is expected to report gifts of $400,000 in the opening day's report.

All soliciting units will be reported at the 12:30 o'clock meeting, at which Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, will preside. Governmental, group solicitation and metropolitan unit workers will meet in the big ball room of the Willard. The special assignment unit will meet, as usual, in the Fairfax room and will adjourn in time to report at the general meeting. This procedure will be followed both today and tomorrow.

Hopes of the special assignments unit to make the official opening of the drive with a report of more than $400,000 are based upon results obtained yesterday, when the unit reported a total of 81 gifts for $65,902. This brings the unit total to date to 348 gifts, amounting to $360,408. Richard W. Hynson, vice chairman, declared his faith in the ability of this unit to bring in more than $40,000 today.

Present Need Stressed.

Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, explained yesterday why private welfare funds are needed in the face of governmental appropriations. He pointed out that the Government is inadequately aiding unemployable people in the District for which it is responsible and is giving no relief whatever to employable people, many of whom are unemployed and others making an income which does not provide bare living necessities.

Mrs. Fedora J. Lewis led the team captains in the special assignments unit yesterday, reporting 19 gifts for a total of $19,149. Andrew Saul was second with 11 gifts, $11,845. Harold N. Marsh reported 9 gifts for $3,280; Philip O. Coffin, 8 gifts, $3,750; Wilson Compton, 17 contributions, $5,725; F. Moran McConihe, one gift, $4,000; James E. Colliflower, 14 gifts, $3,602; Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro, 9, $9,360; Hilleary Hoskinson, 3 gifts, $5,195.

Among the contributions reported yesterday were:

S. Kann's Sons Co., $6,000; Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., $5,400; Mrs. Marshall Field, $4,100; Theodore W. Noyes, $4,000; Mrs. Emile Berliner, $4,000; Judd & Detweiler, Inc., $3,000; Mrs. Sally R. Hitt, $3,000; Washington Loan & Trust Co., $2,745; Washington Times-Herald, $2,500; Anonymous, $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King, $1,800; Mrs. Charles C. Glover, sr., $1,500; Hamilton National Bank, $1,250; Mrs. James Dudley Morgan, $1,250; Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery,

D.C. Driver Dies As Auto Derails B. & O. Express

Locomotive, Cars Halted at Brink of Ravine in Branchville Crash.

Clarence Holloman, 33, whose address was given as 1400 block of Newton street northwest, was crushed to death in the wreckage of his automobile when it was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at the Branchville, Md., grade crossing late yesterday.

The crash derailed the locomotive, which was finally brought to a stop a mile from the scene of the accident. The train stopped barely 100 yards before reaching a small trestle over Paint Branch at College Park.

Had the engine reached the bridge with four of its driving wheels off the rails, it was pointed out, it would probably have plunged into the creek, causing disaster. There were about 45 passengers in the coaches.

Holloman, an employe of a paving company in Washington and the father of one child, swerved his car in front of the speeding locomotive from a road running parallel to the tracks on the engineer's "blind" side, witnesses said.

Tangled and twisted parts of the automobile were strewn for a mile along the tracks. Holloman's body, mutilated beyond recognition, was found pinned in the wreckage of the chassis, caught on the cow-catcher of the engine.

Traffic Warrants Hold Up Licenses Of 21 Auto Firms

Applications for 1937 license tags of 21 Washington automobile dealers are being held up for traffic regulation violations, it was revealed yesterday.

Records in the Traffic Division disclosed that warrants against these firms have not been satisfied, and Capt. Milton D. Smith stated these dealers will not receive their applications until collateral is posted.

Capt. Smith said that under the present system in the District a dealer supplies "dealer's" tags to prospective buyers on temporary five-day registrations. Many times, he declared, motorists operating on the dealer's licenses fail to heed traffic tickets and the warrants are issued against the firm to which the plates are registered.

Under an agreement between the Police Department and the Automotive Trade Association, Capt. Smith said, the Traffic Division sends a form letter to the car dealer notifying him of the driver's failure to post collateral on the ticket and the resultant warrant. The form letter requires the dealer to furnish police the name of the person using the car at the time of the violation.

"When a dealer fails to return the letter to us so that the warrant can be secured against the person who committed the violation there is nothing we can do except to hold the dealer responsible," Capt. Smith said.

Loss of 1937 dealer tags during the first of the year sales period will be a handicap to the firms who fail to make good for the violations, it was said.

Crop Control May Await Good Harvest

Wallace Hints a Delay Until Lower Prices Force Program.

Feels 'Aroused Farmers' Would Demand Plan to Rule Yield.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration may delay plans for revival of farm production control until farmers have an opportunity to reap another crop—maybe a big one—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace intimated yesterday.

The Secretary believes favorable weather and a bumper crop might result in a surplus, in lower prices and in even an almost universal demand for return to AAA adjustment principles.

Wallace said farmers are anxious to harvest another good crop, and the idea there ought to be another crop year before anything more is done about production control has a lot to be said for it. But he warned it might mean a renewed concern over prices.

Effective Methods.

"Obviously we need effective methods to control extremes at either end," he said. "One effective way to get results would be to let the range of weather come to pass, and stop doing too much anticipating."

He said "aroused farmers are worth all of the brain trusters in the world when it comes to getting things done."

A reporter asked if he wanted to give the public a "lesson" in the evils of uncontrolled production.

"I wouldn't want to say that," Wallace smiled.

Four Drought Years.

When it came to forecasting next year's weather, Wallace grew wary. With four successive years of drought, he said, it would look like the favorable odds were "up in the millions." But with the drought cycle still on, any guess he might make on the next crop year would be more a matter "of pitching pennies," he added.

"There doesn't seem to be any doubt we need something more effective than the soil conservation program, unless the weather has greatly changed, or unless the foreign demand for our products has very greatly improved," Wallace said.

"But if the weather continues as it has been, we don't need any production control whatever."

Silent on Proposals.

Reassured by the vote of confidence given adjustment principles of his old invalidated AAA program by a group of representative farmers meeting here last week, Wallace appeared in good spirits, but declined to say definitely whether the farm group's recommendations would be followed. He confessed disappointment over its failure to lay more stress on crop insurance, and announced plans to call into conference farmers from the Great Plains region, who want the Secretary to work out a practical plan of crop insurance to start with the wheat crop of 1937.

Wallace said he thought it possible to work out a solution of the farm problem better than either old AAA production control or the soil conservation program.

"The whole thing is subject to as much improvement as a model T Ford," he said, but declined to add what the improvements should be. He said he viewed crop insurance as "a very real help" to either production control or soil conservation, but a substitute for neither.

Plan Is Considered.

The farm chief said some study was being given to renewal of production control, but intimated he would wait another crop year before making any recommendations.

"With farmer feeling developing as it is, of necessity our legal people will be examining all of the possibilities," he said.

As now taking shape, farm proposals may be limited to some national crop insurance program, a few changes in the soil conservation program with another budgetary allotment of $500,000,000 for payments, and possibly farm tenancy legislation.

Wallace said the farm tenancy problem was not limited to the South, but extended to some parts of Iowa and South Dakota, where

U. S. Honors Soldier Dead At Arlington

President, Pershing Lead in Paying Tribute to World War Heroes.

Speakers Stress Peace, Need to Carry On for International Amity.

Eighteen years after the firing of the last shell in the World War, America yesterday paid tribute to her soldier dead and heard speakers high in public and private ranks plead the cause of peace.

To Arlington Cemetery, whose marble amphitheater was the scene of the Nation's leading observance of Armistice Day, came President Roosevelt to place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

In Bethlehem Chapel in Washington Cathedral simpler, but no less impressive, rites were held later in the day at the tomb of the World War President, Woodrow Wilson. The solemn address of Bishop James E. Freeman was heard by the former President's widow, Gen. John J. Pershing and others who were the former President's close friends.

Beginning at 9 a. m. yesterday and continuing until this morning's early hours, numerous services and ceremonies were held in commemoration of the eighteenth anniversary of the ending of the war and the fifteenth anniversary of the Unknown Soldier's interment on the Arlington heights overlooking Washington.

Pleas for Peace Heard.

Their fervent pleas for peace echoing against headstones of the hero dead surrounding the amphitheater, Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Harry W. Colmery, national commander of the American Legion, told what has been done to keep the United States out of war and what still remains to be done.

Under President Roosevelt, said Woodring, the United States has advanced toward a lasting peace, avoiding entangling commitments with other powers and shaping a constructive foreign policy.

"It is my duty," he said, "to keep secure the defense of our Nation. In this we are succeeding. But make no mistake, our preparations are for defense only. We plan no aggression. We prepare only to resist it. Peace and security go hand in hand.

"To preserve peace with other countries we must present a united front at home. Divided, we are in peril. United, we are secure * * * Triumphantly we advance daily toward a fuller, richer democracy, that can be attained only if we keep the peace at home as well as abroad."

Security Linked to Progress.

Upon continued peace, said the new Secretary of War, depends national progress, full recovery from the depression, Government aid of American citizens and the public welfare, happiness and contentment.

Colmery, the Topeka, Kans., veteran who was installed as commander of the American Legion last September in Cleveland, urged adoption of his organization's three-point war prevention program. It provides for the construction and maintenance of an adequate national defense, a rigid neutrality policy and elimination of war profits.

Complete disarmament would invite disaster and international covenants have been proven undependable, said Colmery, as he urged soundness of the legion plan.

Fulfillment of the existing program to expand military personnel and strengthen the air forces and coast defenses would satisfy the first point, he said.

Regarding the second, he recommended formulation of a neutrality policy to prevent the sending of "American boys to fight other nations' wars."

Warns of War Trading.

"We should approach realistically the danger of trading in munitions and supplies with belligerent nations," he said. "As humiliating as it is to forbid our people to exercise their rights because it may become necessary to vindicate them, we must recognize that warring nations will not respect the rights of neutrals which threaten their victory."

He assailed the system whereby soldiers are sent to the front at a barely living wage while, back home, private fortunes are piled up from excessive profits. For 14 years, he said, the Legion has sought Congressional enactment of legisla-

Rebels Intensify Madrid Assault; Fires Spreading

8,200,000 Enrolled In Armies of World

Geneva, Nov. 11 (AP).—The League of Nations announced today that 8,200,000 men are now permanently under arms throughout the world.

Of this total, 545,000 are attached to world navies.

The League calculations show that men under arms throughout the world just before the outbreak of the World War numbered 5,900,000, not counting naval units.

A League communique said the figures included only the admitted permanent armed forces, and did not include the so-called "parliamentary forces" or semi-permanent military organizations.

4,000 Fresh Soldiers From Catalonia Join Defense of City.

Two Large Blazes Raging in Capital

One Rebel Battery Only 200 Yards From Foe's Front Trenches.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid (Thursday), Nov. 12.—Fascist insurgents launched a desperate attack on Madrid from Los Francesses Bridge toward the University City in the northwest section of the capital at 11:20 p. m. (6:20 p. m., Eastern standard time) last night.

The incessant tat-tat-tat of machine guns and rifles, punctuated by heavy gunfire, especially from the University City area, sounded ominously close to the population in the center of the city.

Madrid citizens feared a general attack on the capital was being signaled as sudden, crackling fire was heard all along the lines from Casa de Campo to the Toledo Bridge.

The sector near Los Francesses Bridge was stoutly defended by an international legion of Poles, Germans, French and Italians, many of whom served in the World War and who had built there the strongest lines of trenches Spain has ever seen.

Rebels in 2 Sections.

The insurgents were believed to have started their sortie in two sections, one fording the Manzanares River at Puerta de Mirro and the other following the Escorial Railroad to Les Franceses Bridge.

Earlier the rebels' batteries a quarter of a mile west of Carabanchel Bajo and north of Cuatro Vientos had rained shells across the river into sections of Madrid.

One insurgent battery was brought a mile nearer to the capital between Carabanchel and the Talavera highway to a point only 200 to 300 yards from the government front-line trenches.

Observers on the Telephone Building in Madrid witnessed shells exploding near the Opera House, the old cathedral, the unfinished new cathedral, the Royal Palace and the North Station.

Two large fires broke out near the Opera House and an evacuated ammunition factory alongside the Segovia Bridge in the wake of the blazing insurgent gunfire.

Stiff Resistance.

The rebel attack met stiff loyalist resistence. Four thousand fresh troops from Catalonia had joined the capital's defenders a few hours earlier.

Shell after shell raised clouds of dust near the Angel Gate on the other side of the Segovia Bridge where an active government battery was emplaced.

Several projectiles narrowly missed the bridges across the Manzaneres while shrapnel repeatedly sprayed the sides of the royal stables on the north side of the royal palace and the south side of the gaunt mass of the new cathedral which has remained unfinished for ten years because of lack of funds.

It was not immediately known whether any shells had hit the palace—the largest royal residence in Europe—which was in the direct line of fire.

The loyalist gunners scored one hit on Carabanchel Bajo, sending up

U. S.-Canadian Trade Is Rising, Figures Reveal

'Marked Recovery' Hailed by State Department; Treaty Praised.

The State Department last night made public the first detailed analysis of the increased flow of trade between the United States and Canada since the old trade barriers were breached by the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement, showing in outline:

A $33,000,000 gain in Canadian imports from the United States for the first nine months of this year over the first nine months of 1935.

A $58,000,000 gain in United States imports from Canada for the same period, as against January to September, 1935.

A total of American exports to Canada for the first nine months of this year of $266,000,000.

A total of American imports from Canada for the same period of $262,000,000.

Marked Recovery.

The State Department hailed the steady month-by-month improvement in trade relations as an evidence of "marked recovery," but continued in its analysis:

"Account needs be taken of the fact that a general moderate trade recovery is in progress in many countries and that various factors other than trade agreements are at work influencing the course of each country's commerce, as a whole or in particular commodities * * * It takes time for the commercial possibilities opened up by the reduction of trade barriers to be fully utilized. It is significant, therefore, that the beneficial stimulus of the Canadian-American trade agreement has already become apparent."

Particularly noticeable in the massed statistics illustrating trade recovery were the vast increases in whisky imports by this country from Canada, and of automobile exports by this country to Canada.

Motor Vehicles Imported.

Under the trade agreement the Canadians were able to import complete motor vehicles from this country without a prohibitive tariff, and although their imports of parts and chassis fell off considerably, this country's sales of cars and trucks to Canada increased by $2,500,000.

The much-critized cattle imports from Canada, which served as part of the Republican barrage against the agreement during the campaign, were reported in detail, revealing that imports of cattle weighing 700 pounds or more rose from the unusually low 1935 first-six-months' figure of 50,000 head to 113,000 head this year, the value of the increased trade amounting to $2,900,000.

World War 'Dud' Kills 2.

Belgrade, Nov. 11 (U.P.).—An unexploded shell which fell during the World War, took the lives of two persons today. The accident occurred in the village of Dole, near Semendria, when a gardener, Stojan Srskio, 32, and a woman helper, were killed when a shovel Srskio was using struck a hidden shell.

Bridge Player Gets Hand in a Million, Thirteen in Spades

To Mrs. Ada Lee Orme Du Puy, wife of William Atherton Du Puy, the author, last night came that adventure in contract bridge which happens once in a lifetime to one out of every million or more players.

She drew a perfect hand, 13 spades, in a game at her residence at 2707 Adams Mill road, and, as a result, made a grand slam, doubled, and scored 2,750 points.

Du Puy was her partner. Opposed to them were Dr. and Mrs. Warren Hunt. When Mrs. Du Puy picked up her hand, she showed no signs of emotion, concealing all behind a "poker face."

The Du Puys have played bridge all their lives, and had read and dreamed of such a hand.

Movies Will Show 26,000,000 How to Apply for Old Age Help

Ushered in by a "trumpet call, loud, emphatic," detailed instructions for 26,000,000 Americans to qualify for the Government's "old-age security" will go on the screens of the country's movie houses next week.

The script of the movie, released to correspondents last night, calls for picturization of all steps necessary for any eligible worker to get his or her name on the rolls for retirement benefits after reaching the age of 65.

While a voice describes the process, the film shows the actual execution, even to signing one's "X," in the case of inability to write, while two others sign as witnesses.

Under the headings of Action and Sound, the script calls for:

"A calendar for the month of November. It slowly zooms forward toward the camera eye. It stops, a large circle appears around a given date." Then the voice: "November 24 is the first day on which you can sign an application for your old-age benefit."

Again the action:

"Pay window. Worker receives blank attached to his pay envelope."

"Quick series of shots of large and small postoffices, from villages to cities."

"Close-up of hands writing, printing" on the application blanks.

Maternal Ancestry of President Is Traced To Royalty; 'Happy Days' Is Motto of Family

If blood means anything, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was destined to be a winner long before he entered the political sweepstakes.

The President comes from a line of distant sires on his mother's side which includes kings, princes, dukes, marquises and innumerable lesser fry, such as chevaliers, counts and barons, a search of musty old "form sheets" in the genealogical room of the Library of Congress revealed yesterday.

William the Conqueror, Charlemagne, Alfred the Great, the King of ancient Scythia, the King of the Merovingians, the Prince of Sulmona, the Governor of Holland in 1429, and scores of seigneurs of medieval France are Delanos, more or less.

There is even a disputed line tracing back to the Actii, a powerful Roman patrician family which lived in the Eternal City in 600 B. C.

De La Noye, de Lannoy, de Lano, Delano——

Thus derives the middle name of the President.

It comes directly from France via Holland and England.

The de Lannoys were an important family in France who were related in various ways to the aforementioned royalty.

It was interesting to note in the library that the ancient family motto, embossed on an armorial seal of three lions rampant, with the heads and necks of unicorns, read as follows: "Bonne Nouvelles."

This, if translated freely, might say "Happy Days," which was F. D. R.'s campaign song. More literally, it is "Good Tidings."

The President has said he is much more interested in his American kin than forgotten European relatives, and well he might be, for he can boast relationship to 11 former Presidents, as well as the President of the Confederate States of America.

While he has innumerable prominent American limbs on his family tree, that tree, like every other, has to have some twigs and leaves. The country is full of Delanos, some being bank tellers, railroad switchmen, telegraphers, and there were even three Congressmen. All of them can claim kinga for ancestors along with Roosevelt.

One remote cousin who turned up in Washington yesterday was Fred G. Rose, of 1737 New Hampshire avenue, whose mother's

Miners Insist Green Explain His Activities

Union Accuses A.F.L. Head of Treachery; C. I. O. Expulsion Asked.

Labor Department; compulsory coverage of all gainfully employed workers under compensation laws, with exclusive State funds; completion of necessary State social security legislation enactment; completion of the program for national system of Federal-State employment service; State-wide regulation of private employment offices, and a Labor Department committee to investigate ways and means of bettering industrial relations.

In the fight for control of organized labor, the Mine Workers' summons to Green to appear and stand trial by its executive board, was based on the following charges:

"1. Participation and conspiracy to suspend the United Mine Workers from membership in the American Federation of Labor contrary to the laws of said Federation.

"2. Failure to adhere and conform to the policies of the United Mine Workers of America as defined and ordered by its international convention.

"3. Continuance of association and fraternization with avowed enemies of the United Mine Workers of America subsequent to its ejection by aforesaid Federation.

"4. Distortion and misrepresentation of aims and objectives of United Mine Workers and its authorized representatives."

The summons to Green was timed in direct conflict with his duties as president of the Federation. The A. F. of L. convention begins in Tampa next Monday. Green was ordered to appear before Lewis and the other mine union officers Wednesday, in the very midst of the convention's lengthy deliberations.

The move was not unexpected. Green also holds honorary union cards in several other unions still in the Federation. If he is ejected from the Mine Workers, as a member, he will merely appear as the representative of some other union by prearrangement.

Associated Press dispatches from Tampa as delegates assembled there for the convention, revealed that the accumulated bitterness of the craft union old-guard laborites, who still cleave to the Federation, will unquestionably culminate in formal expulsion of the C. I. O. unions, observers here said.

Opening for Reds.

John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades division of the Federation, charged that John L. Lewis was opening the doors of labor to Communism. He said that the formation of the C. I. O. was "the opening for which Communist leaders in America and Moscow had sought.

He added in the annual report of his organization:

"Communists, acting under the direction of their leaders, have been actively at work among steel workers throughout the year * * * It is their intention, if steel is organized, to claim the major credit.

"In scrapping their former industrial and political program the communist leaders hope to obtain a position in one part of the American labor movement which would give them free entry into the field which the A. F. of L. had barred to them.

"Eight communists were instructed to become members of trade unions and then to work within the unions to obtain support for the C. I. O. and to create sentiment in favor of a Farmer-Labor party. . . . The purpose of this change in policy was obvious . . . to elect delegates to conventions . . . to capture trade union representation . . . with hopes in time of forming a Farmer-Labor party."

Lewis Denies Ambitions.

Lewis, whom some newspapers have pictured as heading a Farmer-Labor party ticket in 1940, evinced no such desires yesterday at the press conference of the triumvirate of officers of the Labor Nonpartisan League yesterday.

Berry, who conducted the conference as president of the league, said that the three objectives of the organization were the re-election of President Roosevelt; the furtherance of liberalism in the United States, and the thorough organization of the workers and their liberal friends.

Particular significance was attached to the phrase following the listed objectives, stating "* * * so that we can be in a position to adjust ourselves intelligently and effectively to any political realignment that occurs."

Lewis, asked for comment on the current wage increases throughout industry, said dryly:

"Of course, that couldn't possibly have happened before election. That would have been too much of a confession. But the election does mean that many State Legislatures will not now be dominated by the representatives of great industries, and also that with friendly Legislatures, workers will be free to organize in public meetings without being shot down."

Further Efforts for Silver Planned Despite New Deal Blot; London Boosts Price.

By Franklyn Waltman.

IT seems incredible in view of the abortive results attained that President Roosevelt should undertake to do for silver more than his Administration already has attempted. The New Deal silver program is really one of the bad spots in the Roosevelt record. Indeed, it might be termed Mr. Roosevelt's most vulnerable spot—even though the Republicans lacked the courage to attack him there—because there is far less justification for it than for some of the other unorthodox things he has done.

WALTMAN.

Yet hope apparently remains undimmed in the breasts of the Senate "silver bloc." Senator Key Pittman who still dreams of the day when he will see the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, has summoned a session of this "silver bloc" to convene in Reno, Nev., on Saturday, according to an Associated Press dispatch, "to formulate plans for still greater use of silver and to adopt a program to be submitted at the coming session of Congress."

And London speculators are sufficiently convinced that this event, as well as the re-election of President Roosevelt, means "doing something more for silver" that their buying raised the New York price of silver 2¾ cents an ounce, the first increase quoted since last May. At all events, no other suggestion than this has been offered to explain the coincidental rise in the silver price.

Since there is no doubt that the Senate "silver bloc" will formulate a program for "doing something more for silver"—perhaps demanding devaluation of the silver dollar—and since they will fight with fanatical zeal for their objectives this winter and since the "silver bloc" has a demonstrated nuisance value on Capitol Hill, it might be well to review what the New Deal already has attempted to do for silver—and the results.

No Administration in several generations has been as sympathetic to the cause of silver as has that of President Roosevelt. The details of the various proposals undertaken in the last three and one-half years on behalf of silver, if fully set forth, would fill a good-sized volume. In the last two years the Treasury has spent more acquiring silver than was spent in constructing and maintaining the Panama Canal.

Silver has been an object of Administration solicitude since the passage of the Thomas inflation amendment in May, 1933. The only important agreement this country entered into at the London Monetary and Economic Conference concerned silver. As a nice juicy subsidy to the silver-producing States, the President fixed an arbitrary price of 64.64 cents an ounce for newly mined domestic silver—a price 21 cents above the market quotation on the day the figure was set. This artificial price for domestic newly mined silver subsequently was raised to 77.57 cents an ounce.

Despite this huge subsidy to the silver producers at home, the Senate "silver bloc" was not satisfied. It believed—and the President went along with it—that the Treasury should undertake to establish a higher price in world silver markets. Thus the silver purchase act of 1934 was enacted, setting up this country's objective as the acquisition of silver stocks equal to one-third of the gold stock or a price of $1.29 an ounce.

Although the Treasury was permitted a wide discretion in moving toward this objective, the President and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau undertook the commission in good faith. Mr. Roosevelt exercised his discretionary power under the act to order nationalization of silver and to date the Treasury under that decree has acquired 112,988,403 ounces of silver.

The Treasury then commenced buying silver in the world market and soon virtually every ship bound for America was carrying silver consigned to this Government. Foreign speculators apparently profited handsomely as the price daily was fixed higher by the Treasury. Up to last December 27 the Treasury acquired 663,900,000 ounces of silver in this manner. How much has since been acquired through open market purchases remains a Treasury secret.

The price of silver rose in May, 1935, to around 81 cents an ounce. China cried out in anguish as the Treasury action drained that country of the white metal and set in motion deflationary forces. Tremors shot through other currency systems grounded on silver. Finally the Treasury slowed down its foreign purchases, the speculators became alarmed and the price of silver commenced to decline.

In December, 1935, the Treasury suddenly changed its policy regarding purchases abroad, failing to make on the London market any bid whatever one day and for the first time since 1914 no price for silver was quoted. It had become fairly clear that the price of silver throughout the world was being supported by the Treasury. Since last December the price slid downward until it reached 44¾ cents on the New York market—only a cent or so above the price which existed before the New Deal gave silver its first shot in the arm by setting an artificial price for newly mined metal.

The extent of Treasury operations in silver this year remains unknown, but it is believed that open market purchases have been light. The figure of 77.57 cents an ounce is still being paid for newly mined silver and 110,908,481 ounces of the metal have been acquired in that manner since January 1, 1934, more than had been expected, because the price has stimulated silver mining in this country to higher levels of productivity.

In addition, the Treasury is taking the newly mined silver of Mexico and Canada. An arrangement with China has been attempted and although the silver program may have redounded to China's benefit by forcing a reformation of that country's currency system, it created havoc and distress there for a few months.

* * *

The net result of it all is that despite the accumulation of at least 887,796,000 ounces of silver, the Treasury today is little closer to realizing the objective of acquiring one-third as much silver as it has gold — unless undisclosed silver acquisitions are much greater than anyone imagines. The open market price of silver is only slightly more than it was two years ago. American trade with China has been disrupted.

And yet the "silver bloc" apparently thinks "something more" should be done for silver. A "commonsense" bloc should be formed on Capitol Hill to fight for the repeal of the silver purchase act and relieve the Secretary of the Treasury of responsibility for that legislative monstrosity.

Kurtz Is Symphony Concert Conductor

The National Symphony Orchestra last night presented Les Russes de Monte Carlo in Constitution Hall with Efrem Kurtz as conductor. The program included "Swan Lake," an abridged version of "Lebedinoie Ozero," Op. 20 (Chaikovski), Symphonie Fantastique" (Berioz), Polovetzkian from "Knaz Igor (Borodin).

The two ballets, "Swan Lake" and the Berioz symphony were new to Washington. The former is a perfect sample of the type of entertainment designed by Marius Petipa for the Imperial Russian court.

It was noticed by the audience that Efrem Kurtz conducted the entire program, although Hans Kindler was supposed to have directed the Borodin dances. Dr. Kindler left the entire program in the hands of the regular conductor as he and his men did not receive partitions of the score in time to become familiar with certain cuts which had been made.

Pilots' Union Joins New York Seaman Strike

257 Ships Now Reported Tied Up; West Coast Peace Fails.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—The Seamen's Insurgent Strike Strategy Committee tonight claimed two locals of the Master, Mates and Pilots Union had joined the East Coast maritime strike, which it said had spread to 257 ships and more than 19,000 men.

The committee, an expelled group of the International Seamen's Union, said Locals 88 and 90 of the Master, Mates and Pilots voted unanimously late today to support the walkout. It said this was the first such action by any ship officers and would affect 115 men in the New York area.

Without union pilots, no ship would be able to leave the harbor.

Peace Hopes Fade.

San Francisco, Nov. 11 (AP).—Peace talk diminished further on the maritime strike front tonight, although Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady reiterated that he would bring the opposing sides together tomorrow for a resumption of negotiations.

Spokesmen on both sides of the walkout were pessimistic, but would not speak openly of their lack of hope.

Signs appeared that if McGrady's efforts failed again the shipowners and unions would prepare for a long siege of maritime stagnation.

Despite the unions' authorization of the movement of strike-bound ships to their home ports and the avowed willingness of strikers to handle certain perishable cargo, there was virtually no activity along that line.

Five hundred shipyard workers voted tonight on whether to strike tomorrow in Los Angeles.

In New York, striking sailors complained to the police that plainclothesmen were escorting "strikebrakers" to a pier of the American Merchant Line. The strikers asked police protection for their picket lines.

Rank-and-file seamen replaced 185 men in their picket lines at Houston, after police had arrested a similar number in a move to stop picketing. The arrested men were released and police canceled the order to arrest all pickets there.

Seven ships and more than 1,700 persons remained tide up in Hawaiian ports.

Cameraman Foils Attempt to Serve Dr. Dafoe in Suit

Newark, N. J., Nov. 11 (AP).—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, arriving by plane from Chicago late today, told reporters that he had escaped service of a summons in a $1,000,000 breach of contract suit brought by Ivan Spear, a promoter.

The smiling, bespectacled country physician, left here by automobile for New York. Fred Davis, a photographer, told of the incident which brought to a surprise finish the one-day visit at Chicago of the medical adviser to the Dionne quintuplets.

As Deputy U. S. Marshal Joseph Konrath extended the summons toward Dr. Defoe in the plane at the Municipal Airport, Davis said, he grabbed the paper and climbed out. He gave the summons to a bystander and returned to the plane shortly before it took off, Davis said.

The marshal's office in Chicago reported the suit was filed in February, 1935, against Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, parents of the "quints," Dr. Defoe, and 12 other defendants.

In the suit, Spear claimed he contracted with Dionne May 21, 1934, to "exhibit and publicize" the Dionne babies and other members of the family at the Century of Progress Exposition. After he had formed a company to handle the enterprise, Spear said, Dionne was induced to break the contract.

Note to Italian King Omits Emperor Title

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday disregarded the new title of "Emporer of Ethiopia" assumed by King Victor Emmanuel of Italy in transmitting birthday greetings to the monarch.

Addressing the message simply to "His Majesty, Vittorio Emmanuel III, King of Italy," the President said:

"It is my great pleasure to extend to Your Majesty greetings of friendship and good will on this your birthday and best wishes for the continued prosperity of Italy and the happiness of the Italian people."

The United States Government, clinging to its policy of refusing to recognize territory acquired by force, is withholding recognition of Italian annexation of the Ethiopian Empire.

From Columbus, Ohio, where the National Grange is holding its seventieth annual convention, the Administration yesterday received a pledge of "any assistance, co-operation or support it can render," and a bid for farmer direction of the new farm program.

According to Associated Press, L. J. Taber, National Grange head, said:

"If there is to be a permanent, pratical, continuous farm program to restore and maintain farm prosperity and farm purchasing power," that program must provide for guidance and control by the farmers themselves.

Utilities Act Faces N. Y. Court Test

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—The public utilities act designed to place holding companies under Federal supervising and providing possible eventual dissolution for them went on trial in Federal court here today.

Two days of arguments upon a case deliberately selected among others as ideal to test the act's constitutionality—that of the Securities and Exchange Commission against the vast Electric Bond & Share Co. and its subsidiaries and affiliates—were begun before Judge Julian W. Mack.

Specifically at issue is the hight of the SEC to enforce the section of the act requiring registration of holding companies with the commission. Counsel for the utility seeks a judgment that the law is wholly invalid.

Only arguments will be had; the record has been compiled by stipulation.

The company has denied that its business is interstate.

8 States Hunt For Kidnapers Of Policeman

Woman, Two Men Sought; Robbed, Then Freed Him, Says Trooper.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 11.—State police sent out an eight-State alarm today for the arrest of two men and a woman on charges of kidnaping and robbing a State trooper.

The police said Trooper W. A. Turnbull had been abducted near Somerville and taken about 50 miles to Freemansburg, Pa. He made his way to the Pennsylvania State police station at Bethlehem and gave the alarm.

His abductors, Turnbull reported, were riding in a car with Michigan license plates, No. Y31020. They continued westward.

He said the woman and one man were about 28 years old and the second man, who had red hair, about 25 or 26.

A supplemental police alarm at 4:34 p. m. said, "All occupants of this car are armed and dangerous. Care should be used in apprehending them."

At Bethlehem, Pa., Turnbull reported to Pennsylvania highway patrolmen that the two men and woman "strong-armed" him at Somerville, N. J., took his equipment and shoes and held him under guard in the car.

Turnbull told the Pennsylvania patrolmen he had stopped the automobile near Somerville to warn the driver about speeding.

"Dumped" From Car.

Near Freemansburg, Pa., he said, he was "dumped" from his abductors' car. The party crossed the Delaware River by the Easton-Phillipsburg Bridge, the trooper said.

Turnbull went to Bethlehem City police headquarters, after reporting the abduction to State patrolmen.

Turnbull said he knew no reason for the kidnaping.

The spot where they dumped him, he said, was on a mountain road.

He said the abductors considered "bumping him off."

Reconsidering, the trio bound the policeman and removed his shoes, then sped away.

He made his way to a nearby farm house and the farmer took him to Bethlehem.

Soldier for Italy Returns to D. C.

Rocco Pisano, one of the five D. C. Italians who fought against Ethiopia, came back to his home yesterday at 735 Newton place, out of a job and bearing shrapnel wounds in his forearm.

Pisano was struck by a steel fragment from a falling bomb while in a machine-gun nest.

A plasterer by trade, the 31-year-old Italian told his father and mother and his friend, Don Bianchi, that he wants a job. He speaks little English. Mussolini paid his way over and back from Rome at a cost of $250.

Italian World War veterans in Washington tendered him an honorary dinner. For that organization he yesterday placed an Armistice Day wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Officer Puffs His Chest, Pops Buttons—It's a Girl

Harold D. Johnson, one-time champion stolen car "spotter" of the traffic division and now stationed at the Sixth Precinct, ripped three buttons from his uniform yesterday.

But it wasn't during an encounter with a gunman. The buttons popped off when his chest expanded at the announcement:

"It's a girl."

Johnson relayed the news to friends—an 8-pound baby girl, born to his wife, Mrs. Grayce L. Johnson, at Garfield Hospital yesterday. It was his second child.

FHA Will Increase Scope, McDonald Says

Expansion of Federal housing activities next year was predicted yesterday by Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, after a conference with President Roosevelt.

"We discussed plans for the Housing Administration next year," McDonald said. "Housing activities will be expanded. There will be no shortage in our line."

He said his agency had a record month in October, insuring mortgage loans for new construction totaling more than $59,000,000.

Maternal Ancestry of President Traced maiden name was Emily Frances Delanoy. He recalled that his mother, some 30 years ago, upon seeing a picture of Frederick A. Delano (the President's uncle) in a Washington newspaper, remarked that some of the family had dropped the "y" from the name. She said Frederick Delano looked like "some of our folks."

Examination of the Delano genealogy showed that in all probability she, too, was descended from Philippe de la Noye, the first man of the name to come to America. Philippe de la Noye came over on the ship Fortune, landing at Plymouth exactly 315 years ago yesterday, November 11, 1621.

Philippe de la Noye was born in 1602 of French Huguenot parents in Leyden, Holland, and was baptized in the Walloon Church. Going to London, Philippe shipped with 35 others, fleeing to America for religious freedom on the first boat to follow the Mayflower.

They almost got worse treatment here than abroad, for the settlers at Plymouth Rock thought they were enemy French and fired a cannon to muster the Pilgrims for a fight. But when those on shore saw the English flag at the Fortune's masthead, all was well, and the newcomers were welcomed.

Philippe came ashore and built the first Huguenot home in America. He married Hester Dewsbury, of Duxbury, in 1634, and in a country where all unnecessary incumbrances had to be cast aside, he dropped a large part of his name, becoming plain Philip Delano. His wife bore him a son, Jonathan.

All of Jonathan's noble ancestry was forgotten as the more immediate problem of King Phillip's War occupied the settlers during the year 1675-76. The Indian king's Pequot warriors cost the colonists 1,000 lives, 13 towns and 600 buildings. Son Jonathan was one of 18 white men and 22 friendly Indians who set out on an expedition to capture the Indian chieftain.

Jonathan, it seems, got a lieutenancy out of the expedition, but an Indian got credit for ending the war. King Phillip was killed by a treacherous tribesman before the party reached him. His head was mounted on a pole in Plymouth.

From then on—if then—until 1932 the Delanos did not cut any figure in American history. After the Pequot War Jonathan settled on 800 acres granted his father at Dartmouth. His son, Thomas, never had to fight anyone. Thomas had a son, Ephraim, who became a sea captain. His son, Warren, born in 1779, also was a sea captain, out of New Bedford.

When the British attacked in 1814, Capt. Warren Delano fled with his wife and three children, Warren, 5; Frederick, 3, and Franklin, 1, to an island farm. The baby, Franklin, lived to be 80 years old, and it was for him the President was named.

Capt. Warren Delano No. 2 was the father of Sarah Delano, the President's mother.

So, the record shows, through three centuries of quiet American life, the President's maternal ancestry traces back through the Delanos to some important French families and thence circuitously back to many of the greatest names in history.

Nine hamlets in the United States, scattered from the Pacific Coast to New England, bear the name Delano, showing how the descendants have scattered over the continent, founding new towns. There is one town of Delano in Ontario, Canada, and there also still remains a living link with the Old World, the town of Lannoy, in France, a village of 1,500 population.

Troops were marshaled in the Gran Via for a march to the barricades in the north section of the city along the Manzanares River.

The new battalions arrived to reinforce the international legion in the university city sector as the newly arrived 3,000 Catalans opened fire on insurgent trenches with machine guns and rifles.

(A dispatch from Valencia stated the general labor union there ordered its members to appear for duty at the rate of 1,000 a day selected from card numbers.

(Columns of militia arrived daily in Valencia, the dispatch said, en route to join the government forces defending Madrid. Several thousand have been dispatched to the Capital from Barcelona, it was reported.)

While the rest of the world yesterday solemnly commemorated the end, 18 years ago, of the worst war the world has known, Spaniards fought Spaniards for the sixth day at the gates of their country's capital.

With 40 blocks of the city still smoldering from incendiary bombardment the day before, an apartment building in the residential area near the Segovia Bridge was fired by one shell yesterday; another struck near the gas works.

On the western Madrid front the stubborn government forces held off repeated enemy assaults, cheering the defense junta of the city by their performance under fire.

The fight was now up to the infantry, Col. Jose Miaja, defense counsel, said because many of the Madrid artillery batteries had been blasted into silence by the accuracy of rebel gunners and war plane pilots.

gineer, said he did not see the approaching automobile. Witnesses said the train was traveling about 70 miles an hour. It had left Baltimore at 2 o'clock and was due in Washington at 2:52 p. m. The accident occured at 2:40.

Otis Printz, Falls Church, Va., was unloading a truck near the crossing when the accident occurred.

"There was no outcry," he said. "Even the sound of the crash was almost drowned in the roar of the engine."

Holloman, Printz said, must have been deeply absorbed not to have noticed the warning lights and bells, which signal motorists of approaching trains.

Engineer Blizzard, whose home is in Halethorpe, Md., said he had a difficult time stopping the engine because the automobile tires got under the drive wheels of the locomotive and he was unable to get traction.

3 Masked Men Seize $250,000 In Gem Holdup

Owner of Shop, 2 Clerks Bound by Robbers in Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Three masked men walked into a jewelry shop on the fourth floor of a mid-town bank building today while the city's Armistice Day parade passed by on a nearby street, bound the owner and two clerks and escaped with jewelry valued by the proprietor at $250,000.

Charles Diesinger, the jeweler, said the men stripped the shop display cases, the office safe and took $100 from his wallet.

No one reported seeing the men leave the building, which was almost deserted for the holiday. Elevator operators said the men probably used a stairway opening on to a back street.

The robbers walked into the shop wearing black masks and carrying pistols, Diesinger told detectives. While one stood guard, the others bound him and the clerks with wire.

They lay on the floor, Diesinger said, while the men filled the bags with jewelry.

A stenographer in an adjoining office told her employer, Phillip Klein, she heard a tapping on the wall.

Klein investigated and found Diesinger lying on the shop floor kicking the wall. He freed Diesinger and the clerks and notified police.

Miss Florence White, 65, who was behind the counter, said "they were just putting on their masks as they entered the door and I thought they were kidding.

Taken by Surprise.

"As Mr. Diesinger and Mr. Weiss (Charles Weiss, 35, a clerk) came from the back room one of them shouted:

"'That's right, come on out!'

"The showroom is rather small and they had difficulty in moving around while they were tying us up. They weren't at all rough with me. They taped my mouth and put me on the floor. Then they threw a sack of some sort over my face so I couldn't see."

Diesinger said "we were taken so by surprise that none of us could sound the burglar alarm."

Trio Convicted On White Slave Charge in Hour

Mrs. Mary Sherman Faces Maximum Term of Seven Years.

Deliberating less than an hour, a jury in District Court yesterday returned a verdict finding Mary Sherman, alias Mary Hipple, her husband, Joseph Sherman, and Joseph Marback guilty of conspiring to violate the White Slave Traffic act. By order of Justice James M. Proctor all were committed to the District Jail to await sentence next week.

Mrs. Sherman, visibly affected by the verdict, was also found guilty of violating the White Slave Traffic act. She faces a maximum sentence of seven years, while her co-defendants can receive only from four months to two years.

Two others named in the indictment, Jean Gordon and Ida Jackson, did not go to the jury. Jean Gordon was given a directed verdict of not guilty by order of Justice Proctor, while the Jackson woman had previously pleaded guilty.

The alleged conspiracy involved the transportation of a young woman from West Virginia to Washington for immoral purposes. She turned State's evidence and informed Roger Robb, assistant United States Attorney, of the manner in which she was allegedly enticed from West Virginia to the District.

Proposed Bus Line Brings Complaint

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday was informed that residents of Fifth street northwest are organizing opposition to the proposed routing of a regular Takoma Park bus service should the application of the Capital Transit Co. be granted.

Parents of children who attend Barnard and St. Gabriel's schools were said to be especially concerned at the prospect of frequent bus service on an adjacent street.

Street Vender Refuses To Prosecute Officer

Harold L. Berg, 20-year old transient street vender from Minnesota, who accused a traffic policeman of striking him on the nose Tuesday night, refused to prosecute the policeman in Police Court yesterday.

Berg was arrested by Richard O. Bankert, of the Traffic Division, Tuesday, for selling song sheets in the restricted area. He was charged with being an unlicensed vender. This charge was disposed of when Judge Isaac R. Hitt took the youth's personal bond.

Dinner Is Given For European Radio Officials

Chairman of F. C. C. Host at Affair; Diplomats Among Guests.

In an atmosphere of international good will, 35 representatives of foreign broadcasting companies—representing all of the major European powers embroiled in the World War—sipped cocktails and dined at the Shoreham Hotel last night as guests of Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

The foreign radio representatives arrived in Washington by airplane at 4 p. m., after participating in an international broadcast en route from New York.

As a feature of the tenth anniversary celebration of the National Broadcasting Co., Senor Guglielmo Marconi, father of radio, conversed in a short wave two-way broadcast with the foreign officials on their planes from his yacht at Genoa, Italy.

"We will soon be able to see each other by transatlantic television," Marconi said.

Robert Jardillier, Minister of Communications of France, and Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union, spoke over the short wave broadcast from the planes.

Ambassador Andre de Laboulaye, of France, and Czechoslovakian Counselor Sourek met the visitors at the airport and they sped to the Shoreham behind a police escort.

Prall in welcoming the delegates told them he knew they were weary of receptions and banned speech making at his dinner.

Among members of the diplomatic corps who attended the dinner were Ambassador Laboulaye, Ambassador Hans Luther, of Germany; Otto Wadstad, Minister from Denmark; Dr. Josef Nemecek, Charge d'Affaires, Czechoslovakian Legation; Witold Wankowicz, Counselor Polish Embassy; Edouard Feer, Counselor Switzerland Legation; Eugenia Bonardelli, Counselor for Emigration, Italian Embassy; Herr Herbert Blankenhorn, Third Secretary, German Embassy; Rastko Petrovic, Secretary Yugoslavia Legation; Stig M. Godfren, engineer, French postoffice department.

Wives Entertained.

While their husbands were attending Prall's dinner, the wives of members of the delegation were entertained at the home of Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, 2900 Cleveland avenue northwest.

At noon today the visiting radio officials will be guests of the Overseas Writers at luncheon at the National Press Club. Maurice Rambert and Arthur Burrows, president and secretary, respectively, of the International Broadcasting Union, will speak on "International Radio and World Peace."

U. S. Chamber Studies Change In Security Act

Suggested Revisions Will Be Made Public in Special Report, Nov. 20.

By the Associated Press.

With proposals for changes in the administration's social security program expected in the next Congress, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was disclosed yesterday to be making a comprehensive study of possible revisions in the law.

The chamber, considered the spokesman for a large sector of American business, is scheduled to make public its views through a special committee report at a directors meeting, November 20.

Chamber attaches maintained their customary silence today on what the report may say, but sources close to the organization predicted it would set out detailed suggestions for revamping the security law.

Exemptions to Be Asked.

Among other things, these sources said, insertion of a provision exempting private pension plans may be urged. Particular interest attached to what stand would be taken toward tax payments under the law, which were a subject of heated controversy during the recent campaign.

These taxes, which start at 1 per cent of payrolls on employers and 1 per cent of wages on employes and eventually mount to 3 per cent on each, were attacked by the Republican leadership. Democrats charged distorted statements regarding them had been distributed in pay envelopes.

Already, some American Federation of Labor leaders have said they will ask Congress to place the entire tax burden on employers.

Private System Seen.

In the past, the chamber has taken a firm position against governmental efforts to reduce the "whole complex problem" of social security "to one of legislative formulae."

"Interference by government," it said in a recent declaration of policies, "can only postpone the final solution" of security problems "by making it more difficult for business to assume its own obligations in the matter."

There was a possibility that, in view of this policy, the organization might outline possibilities of setting up a broad, privately-operated security system, informed sources, said however, that this would not preclude the chamber from making specific recommendations for changes in the governmental plan.

By the Associated Press.

Whitinsville, Mass., Nov. 11.—Brig. Gen. Chester Harding, 70, U. S. A., retired, died here today at the home of his father-in-law, Josiah M. Laseli.

He was engineer of rivers and harbors at Chicago and St. Louis, Mo., and later instructor of engineering at West Point. During the Spanish-American War he was on duty at Newport, R. Appointed in 1907 as assistant division engineer in Panama, he was promoted from time to time until he became Governor General of Panama Canal Zone in 1916. He was retired with the rank of lieutenant general in 1918.

Two Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a Glass of Water

The modern way to ease a cold is this: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Then repeat, if necessary, according to instructions in the box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat fever and the pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will act as a medicinal gargle to provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain. It is really marvelous; for it acts like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we know, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's — not for "aspirin" alone.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. (ADV.)

WOODWARD & LOTHROP
WASHINGTON

Dear Sir:

We do not want to be formal, but the season makes it necessary.

There is a chill in the air, there are parties in the air, and it is time to look over that part of your wardrobe which is concerned with dinners, debutantes and dates.

It is a good time to look over that part of your wardrobe, too, not so much for what is technically known as a tuxedo or a full dress garment as to see whether it is ready for the first occasion. To see whether linen has yellowed - whether clothes have become unbecomingly tight - or whether, of all important things, their details have slipped from grace in the matter of style.

We are sticklers for form in the formal. Nothing short of the correct suits us. And if nothing short of that suits you, you will be in to see us we are sure.

Very truly yours,

WOODWARD & LOTHROP

Suit Challenges Vetoing Power Of Court Head

Action Charges McMahon Lacks Right to Revoke Other Judges' Orders.

The right of the presiding judge of the Police Court to refuse issuance of papers commuting sentences imposed by other members of that court will be tested in District Court November 20, it was learned yesterday following the petition for a writ of mandamus on Presiding Judge John P. McMahon, of Police Court.

In the petition, Thomas O'Shea, 48-year-old, World War veteran who was sentenced to serve 180 days in lieu of a $100 fine, asked that papers which Judge Robert E. Mattingly issued be formally presented by the court to officials of the Occoquan jail so that he could be released.

O'Shea, sentenced on October 31, was sent to jail when he was unable to pay his fine. Four days later, his attorneys, George Boden and James Sheros, appeared before the committing judge and informed him that O'Shea was suffering from tuberculosis and should be given hospitalization here. Judge Mattingly entered a notation on the information which read: "Due to the fact of this man's physical condition, I recommend his immediate release."

The papers were sent up to Chief Clerk Frank Sebring, who, acting on orders of the presiding judge held them up for inspection by McMahon. The prisoner still is in jail, although the prior custom has been to release prisoners on recommendations similar to that of Judge Mattingly.

O'Shea's attorneys contend Judge McMahon has no right to "arbitrarily disregard" Judge Mattingly's recommendation to release the man. The petition said that Judge McMahon, long known as a stickler for formality, had insisted upon his right to pass personally on all "release" papers.

25,000 Are Needed On Jobless Census

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper yesterday said about 25,000 persons would be needed to conduct a projected unemployment census for which the Commerce Department plans to ask Congress to appropriate some $15,000,000.

He said the proposed count would provide detailed information on the causes of unemployment and the economic status of those out of work.

He said workers on relief rolls would not be used for the survey, as "highly trained people will be necessary."

Asked whether the census-takers would be chosen by Civil Service tests, Roper said they would be given "special training which would be the equivalent of Civil Service training."

To a question whether some workers might not be appointed at the behest of Congressmen, Roper answered:

"If a Congressman has got somebody who fits in, then we would try to train him—I used the word 'try.'"

Guinness Heiress Sails for France

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Tanis Guinness Montagu, of the wealthy Irish brewing family, who was to have married the Earl of Carnarvon November 4 in Baltimore but didn't, sailed today to talk to her father, Benjamin Guinness, in Normandy, France, about the romance.

No reason ever was given for the failure of the scheduled marriage to take place.

Mrs. Montagu, before sailing today, said that her engagement with Lord Carnarvon was "definitely off," and that she was going to France merely because her father "wants to know what this is all about."

The earl sailed for England on November 6 with the remark: "All this is my own business."

Mgr. Curran Is Buried; 'Padre of Coal Fields'

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 11 (AP).—Mgr. J. J. Curran, "padre of the hard coal fields," was buried today. Business houses in many parts of the Wyoming Valley closed in memory of the "breaker boy" who became a prelate and who won national fame as a mediator of differences between anthracite miners and their employers.

More than 200 clergymen, including dignitaries of the Catholic Church, took part in the services in old St. Mary's Church, where Mgr. Curran was pastor. Hundreds, unable to get into the church, stood in the streets during the services.

Bethlehem Steel to Spend $35,000,000

Plant Expansions Will Be Constructed at Sparrow's Point, Md.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—One of the largest programs for plant expansion in the posidepression era, involving a major addition to the South's steel-making capacity, was disclosed today in the announcement of a $35,000,000 construction appropriation by Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The program, which will be completed by the end of 1937, continues one started in 1935 on which $34,500,000 already has been spent. First construction under the new plans will be erection of a continuous strip-sheet mill and other facilities at Sparrows Point, Md.

In a statement accompanying the announcement, E. G. Grace, president, said:

"The primary object of our program has been the further diversification of our business by providing additional finishing facilities for the production of the lighter steel products, such as sheets, strip, cold rolled tin plates, rods, wire and wire products.

"The first important units in the present program which have already come into operation are the continuous sheet, strip and plate mill at the Lackawanna, N. Y., plant and the addition to the tin plate department at the Sparrows Point, Md., plant for the production of cold rolled tin plate, and the installation of facilities for the production of bethanized wire at Sparrows Point, Md., and Youngstown, Md."

Glass' Re-election Costs Him Nothing

By the Associated Press.

In his own handwriting, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, reported yesterday that he spent "not one cent" to obtain his re-election.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, told the clerk of the Senate in another campaign expenditure statement that he had returned "all contributions" except $275 donated by immediate friends. His only other disbursements were $500 contributed by the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee.

Largest expenditures yet reported were $2,164 by Clyde L. Herring, successful Democratic Senatorial candidate in Iowa, and $1,156 by Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky.

Senators Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama; Russell (Democrat), Georgia; Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi; Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, and Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, listed no disbursements in the general election.

Rep. Johnson May Reject Job On D. C. Group

West Virginian Undecided on Chairmanship of Appropriations Unit.

Representative George W. Johnson (Democrat), of Parkersburg, W. Va., yesterday said he was "undecided" whether he would accept the chairmanship of the District Appropriations sub-committee next year.

Johnson became the ranking Democrat on the sub-committe and in line for its chairmanship through the defeat of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, and the death of Representative Bernard W. Jacobson, of Iowa.

Although Johnson refused to reveal the cause of his indecision, the District Appropriations Committee chairmanship has for many years been looked upon as a "thankless job" by members of the House.

Johnson said he was surprised at the heavy Democratic majorities rolled up in West Virginia and expressed the belief the next four years of the Roosevelt Administration would be marked by reduction of governmental expenses and retrenchment in the emergency agencies.

In the next Congress Johnson will be the only remaining Democratic member of the House District Appropriations Sub-committee, which at the last session entered into a gentleman's agreement with the Senate District Appropriations Committee to carry out the recommendations of the President's Special Fiscal Relations Investigating Committee.

Possibility that Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, might resign as chairman of the Appropriations Committee to become chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, has caused some alarm among friends of the District.

Senator Glass has served as a member of the District Appropriations Sub-committee in past years and has been sympathetic toward the needs of the local government.

Should he resign as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, who has seldom shown a friendly interest in the District would be in line to succeed Glass.

Three vacancies exist on the Senate District Appropriations Committee. They were created when Senator Carey, of Wyoming, was defeated and Senators Coolidge (Democrat) of Massachusetts, and Keyes (Republican) of New Hampshire, failed to run for re-election.

Johnstown Flood Hero Dies of Auto Injuries

Windber, Pa., Nov. 11 (AP).—John L. Baker, who often told friends of galloping down the valley above Johnstown in 1889, spreading news that the South Fork dam had broken, died today.

More than 2,000 lost their lives in the ensuing flood, but Baker was credited in the village of South Fork, with warning scores there in time to escape the onrushing wall of water.

The 64-year-old Baker was struck October 7 by an automobile and never recovered.

Court Upholds Dual Liability On Bank Stock

Decisions Given in Cases of Louisville and Detroit Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals laid down broad principles today governing the conduct of directors and stockholders of banks.

Two important decisions were given today in the cases of closed banks in Louisville, Ky., and Detroit, Mich.

In the Detroit case, it held that stockholders who exchanged shares in the First National Bank-Detroit for shares in a holding company for stock of that and othe. banks, were liable for double assessments on their stock.

If stockholders in a bank should be permitted to transfer their stock to a holding company outright, the decision said, "the vital purpose of the statutes (double liability) * * * would be nullified, because the holding company, without assets other than the bank stocks, would fail if the banks should fail."

In the Louisville case, it freed 30 nonofficer directors of responsibility for losses of nearly $5,000,000 in loans, contending that the bank's president and cashier had concealed from the directors involved facts which would have guided them in dealing with the loans.

The Detroit bank closed at the time of the 1933 national bank holiday, while the Louisville bank closed November 16, 1930.

The Detroit decision involved approximately $35,000,000 in double liability assessments.

As a result, associates of B. C. Schram, receiver of the First National Bank-Detroit, said they expected the collection of double liability would be speeded. Approximately $8,000,000 in assessment payments already has been received and a number of large stockholders placed the amount of their liability in escrow pending the decision.

William O'Connor Is Buried in N. Y.

Burial rites for William Charles O'Connor, 79, one-time head of Theodore Roosevelt's campaign headquarters here, who died at Homeopathic Hospital Sunday, were conducted yesterday in New York.

Special rites were held by the Elks Lodge and the Central Labor Union, two organizations of which he was a member, Tuesday night, at Hines' undertaking establishment.

In 1904, in the old Riggs House, O'Connor was in charge of the Roosevelt headquarters. He was appointed to a position with the Government Printing Office in 1890, and elected to be a delegate to four international headquarters of the Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

Pergler Blames Foreign Press For Emphasis on U. S. Crime

Dean Declares Banditry No More Prevalent Here Than Abroad.

Taking sharp issue with foreign critics, Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School, told the Lions Club yesterday that he does not believe there is more crime in America than on the European continent.

Speaking at the regular luncheon meeting of the club, Dr. Pergler said:

"Crime news from America is always featured in the European press. The word 'gangster' has passed into a number of continental languages. The normal is not news, of course; nevertheless, excessive emphasis is placed by the European press upon American crime. There are no adequate comparative figures but I do not believe there is more crime in America than on the European continent.

Crime Press Grows.

"It is true that the great open spaces of this continent are not and cannot be thoroughly policed. In any event, crime here is more spectacular, and perhaps even organized, but that there is more of it from a purely statistical point of view I seriously doubt."

Dr. Pergler also took issue with the oft-repeated assertion that the sensational press is peculiarly an American institution.

"During my last stay in Europe," he said, "one of the most interesting phenomena to be observed was the growth, even in Central Europe, of what is known as the boulevard press, which to an extent is an imitation of a certain type of American newspaper. Is not imitation the sincerest form of flattery? The difference is, however, that not even the most sensational American newspaper would print the sort of stuff that appears at times in certain European publications."

Declaring that American newspapers also do a better job of political reporting, the National Univeristy dean said:

Papers Are Partisan.

"On the political side, the difference between the continental and the American press, with a few exceptions, is America has newspapers, continental Europe has party organs.

"Even the most vigorous partisan paper in the United States does not dare to suppress completely a pronouncement of an important government official belonging to another political faith. Across the Atlantic that is a frequent occurrence, and when such things are mentioned, it is usually done by way of attack. The editorial function of the paper and its purely news mission are confused and commingled—anything is grist to the partisan mill."

As an example of superior American newspaper work, Dr. Pergler cited the civil war in Spain, expressing the opinion that people here are much better informed as to what is really happening in Spain than are the populations of Europe.

Forest Fires Cost $64,690.

The Forest Service reported yesterday forest fires on protected areas in Virginia during the calendar year, 1935, did a total of $64,690 damage, according to the Associated Press. Only $990 of the total damage was from fires on Federal lands, the remainder being in State and privately owned forests.

Aid Asked in Fight For $1 Bus Passes

The American University Park Citizens Association last night voted to ask the Federation of Citizens Associations to support their fight for a uniform rate of $1 for weekly bus passes.

The association also requested that Forty-sixth street northwest be made an arterial highway from Massachusetts avenue to River road. They ask that stop signs be installed on the street between those points.

In a resolution commending the work of William A. Roberts as people's counsel, the citizens urged that the office be continued and that a competent man be appointed to take the place of Roberts, who recently resigned.

Sewer Orders Review Denied By High Court

Arlington Tribunal's Acts Are Upheld; Hunting Season to Open.

Two petitions for review of orders of the Arlington County Circuit Court in connection with the county sewer project were refused by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday.

The petitioners were Artino Brothers, of Washington, who contended that a contract for which a check of $5,510 was filed with the county was not consummated, and Mickels Brothers, of Canton, Ohio, who sought an appeal from an order involving similar circumstances.

The Circuit Court's decision that the county was within its rights was upheld in each case.

Ad Award Goes To Wilkins Coffee

Wilkins Coffee newspaper advertising has been selected by National Ad-Views, a leading trade publication, as the most effective coffee advertising appearing in newspapers throughout the world during the period from October 1, 1935, to October 1, 1936, it was announced yesterday.

The Wilkins account is handled by Lewis Edwin Ryan, Inc., a national advertising agency with headquarters in Washington. The Ryan company prepared and placed the advertising for the winning campaign.

Coffee advertising appearing in daily newspapers throughout the world was considered by National Ad-Views to determine the winner.

In addition to winning the first place for coffee advertising, the Wilkins campaign won sixteenth place in the class including advertising for all food and manufactured products. No other coffee was mentioned among the first 50 advertisers in the latter group.

Advertising Firm Opens Office Here

The William H. Rankin Co., of New York City, yesterday announced the opening of a Washington office at 1701 Connecticut avenue northwest. The company will handle both advertising and public relations accounts.

Although specialists in public relations for 20 years, Rankin has only recently added a department to handle public relations exclusively. They are setting up an office here, they say, because of the necessity for a national and international agency to keep in close touch with the State and Commerce Departments.

Two-Day Old Baby Snatched From Dog

Pearl River, La., Nov. 11 (AP).—A 2-day-old baby boy snatched from the mouth of a dog had this rural settlement excited today.

Mrs. Louis Crawford, sitting on the porch of her home in the piney woods near here, first noticed the dog running among the trees with a white bundle in his mouth.

She seized the bundle.

Mrs. Crawford said scores of persons visited her to see the 8-pound child, "in the best of health," and about "50 people already want to adopt it."

"We're going to call it Moses because it was found by a miracle," Mrs. Crawford said.

Dr. Gallup Opposes Straw Votes 'Gag'

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 11 (AP).—The Tampa Daily Times today quoted Dr. George H. Gallup as expressing opposition to a proposal by United States Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, for Federal supervision of straw votes.

Dr. Gallup conducted the Institute of Public Opinion poll which forecast the re-election of President Roosevelt.

The Times, in a copyrighted interview, quoted him as saying an attempt to bar such returns from the mails "would be a direct violation of the freedom of the press."

Concerning Senator McKellar's advocacy of a Congressional investigation of the Literary Digest tabulations, which indicated Gov. Alf M. Landon would be elected President, Dr. Gallup said:

"Personally, I have complete faith in the honesty of the people who supervised the Literary Digest poll. They had everything to gain and nothing to lose by being right."

He discounted the idea that voters might be influenced by pre-election returns.

Navy Airman Dies In Crash on Coast

The street car was operated by William Shoemaker, 32, of 1111 Staples street northeast.

A 4-year-old boy, Edward Jones, of 1509 V street southeast, suffered lacerations of the forehead and skull injuries when he walked into the side of a car driven by Henry W. Grimes, 17, of 1324 Bay street southeast. He was taken to a Providence Hospital.

Watkins, Colo., Nov. 11 (AP).—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Heid and of Mrs. Heid's mother, Mrs. Maggie Berkes, of Denver, riddled by shotgun pellets, were found today on the Berkes ranch near here. Sheriff Lou Bellard said it "was a double killing and suicide," resulting from a family quarrel.

Armistice Day Speakers Strike Peace Keynote

President Leads Nation in Solemn Tribute to Soldier Dead.

...on which, in time of emergency, would give the President the power to determine the material resources and agencies necessary to success and to stabilize all prices.

Hailing the scheme as "the greatest instrumentality for peace yet proposed," Colmery emphasized that it would not cost a penny to enact, would be operative only in time of war and would "place the protection of the citizen above the protection of the dollar bill."

While Gen. Pershing, 76-year-old last survivor of the allied high command, placed the 3-foot wreath of huge white chrysanthemums at the base of the glistening tomb, the President stood with head bowed and uncovered. Secretary Swanson, during the minute of silent tribute which followed, stood beside Admiral William H. Standley, retiring chief of naval operations, and Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff.

Others Speak.

Brief addresses were given in the Arlington rites, held under auspices of the District department of the American Legion, by Col. Rice W. Means, chairman of the Armistice Day committee; Mrs. O. W. Hahn, of Nebraska, national president, American Legion Auxiliary, and Horace W. Lineburg, District department commander.

Music was by the Army Band and Fort Stevens Drum Corps. A female quartet, the West Virginia Legionettes, sang. The Rev. Park Huntington pronounced the invocation and the benediction was given by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder.

Coming immediately after wreath-placing ceremonies at the Unknown Soldier's marble sepulcher, the amphitheater services attracted 5,000 at the beginning, but hundreds left before the services were over because of a lag in the program. This was due to deferment of the main speeches for the radio broadcasting schedule.

An overflow crowd was on hand when President Roosevelt, accompanied by Gen. Pershing and Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, stepped out of his automobile and walked to the tomb.

Legion Takes Charge.

After the President and his party departed, the American Legion continued with the ceremonies, placing wreaths and massing the posts' colors. Uniformed ranks included the department's guard of honor, the Arlington (Va.) Legion Guard and the Fort Stevens Drum Corps.

Bishop Freeman's address featured the services at President Wilson's tomb in Washington Cathedral. The memorial has been held each Armistice Day since the former President's death in 1924.

Calling attention to rekindling of the war spirit abroad, the speaker explored the failure of the idealistic objectives of the League of Nations to reach fruition.

Agitators Assailed.

"Let us be reminded on this memorable anniversary," he said, "that world order and peace do not proceed from those whose lives are dominated and controlled by selfish motives. Those who today are fanning the flames of rivalry and hate, hastening the world on to a fresh conflict, are men who have little of moral worth and nothing of religious conviction."

Bishop Freeman said America will not permit "alien faith and alien conception of government" to impose themselves on this country's policies and destiny.

For the first time in the 12-year history of these special Armistice Day tributes to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, there was an official representative of the White House. He was Col. Edwin M. Watson, U. S. A., President Roosevelt's military aide.

Col. Watson led the procession into Bethlehem Chapel. The participants, each bearing wreaths to be placed on the simple cenotaph bearing the simple inscription, "Woodrow Wilson," included:

Worth Bagley Daniels, jr., grandson of Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in Wilson's Cabinet; Charles S. Hamlin, representing Hamilton Fish Armstrong, president, and other officers of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation; Oliver P. Newman, carrying a wreath of chrysanthemums from Bernard M. Baruch; Catherine Hickey and Richard Wheeler, student representatives of the Washington high school named for the wartime President; Legion Commander Colmery, Auxiliary President Mrs. Hahn; Col. John Thomas Taylor, chairman of the American Legion's legislative committee, and other representatives of Foreign Wars and the Legion and Veterans.

Mrs. Wilson At Rites.

The scriptural reading was by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes. Prayer was offered by the Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, where President Wilson worshiped.

Mrs. Wilson sat only a few feet from her husband's tomb. She was accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace and the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler. Among others present were R. Walton Moore, acting Secretary of State, and Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State and son-in-law of President Wilson.

The D. A. V. services, conducted in honor of nurses and other women who gave their services in the World War, were held in the cathedral's great choir. They were conducted by Canon Raymond L. Wolven. Bishop Freeman extended a greeting and the speaker was M. Froome Barbour, national commander, Disabled American Veterans.

One of the earliest of the day's many exercises was that of First Division veterans who gathered at their memorial south of the State, War and Navy Building. Maj. C. R. Huebner placed a wreath.

Disabled American Veterans placed several wreaths at the Unknown Soldiers Tomb and later conducted their own services in Washington Cathedral.

Veterans of Foreign Wars held special rites in Arlington Cemetery. Last night they further marked the occasion with an Armistice Day ball at the Willard Hotel.

War Mothers' Rites.

American War Mothers held their observance at the Capitol. Last night Admiral J. M. Reeves, of the Navy General Board, addressed a gathering in Jewish Community Center.

In the forenoon, Greek-American World War veterans held services in St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church. Later they placed a wreath at the Tomb in Arlington and paid a separate tribute at the grave of George Dilboy, outstanding Greek-American hero.

Among the many who decorated the final resting place of the Unknown Soldier was Edward F. Younger, the World War sergeant who selected the unidentified body which was to symbolize perpetually the supreme sacrifice of American manhood.

It was Younger, now a thin-haired foreman in a Chicago postoffice, who entered a little French chapel in Chalons 15 years ago and, after circling three times the room in which four caskets rested, chose the one for shipment to Washington.

"I didn't how to chose," he said yesterday, "for any or all of them might have been buddies of mine. Finally I was drawn to the casket second on the right from the door, and I selected that one. To this day I don't know why."

Story in Post Reunites War Buddies; Doughboy Finds Side-Kick in Mt. Alto

Article Bridges 18-Year Gap for 2 Members of 313th Infantry.

A story and picture appearing in yesterday's Post reunited two World War buddies who had not seen each other since the first Armistice Day.

To Harry C. Snideman, Mt. Alto Hospital's philosopher of cheer, whose heart affliction is incurable, the meeting was a high spot of his 34-month stay in the institution.

It was a red letter day, too, for Earl E. Hutchinson, who many times in the last few years had passed within a few yards of his overseas comrade without knowing it.

Snideman and Hutchinson were members of the same platoon in the 313th Infantry, which figured in some bitter engagements on the Western Front. When the war ended they parted, not to meet again—until yesterday.

Going through his Post yesterday morning at the breakfast table in his home, 247 Quackenbos street northwest, Hutchinson received a pleasant jolt when his eye caught the unmistakable features of his old crony in a one-column cut. Below, though he didn't need it to make sure this was the friend he had been seeking for years, was the caption: Harry C. Snideman.

It was about 10 a. m. when

Elevator Firm Employe, Hospital Philosopher Happy at Meeting.

Snideman, sitting on the porch outside Ward D, looked up from his book to see his long-lost buddy approaching. They recognized each other instantly.

Hutchinson, an employe of the Otis Elevator Co., had made several business visits to the hospital in recent months, but he never knew Snideman was a patient there. The Post picture and story resulted in the renewal of a close friendship which fate had broken 18 years ago.

that which prevailed during the recent depression."

Brandeis also asked if certain systems of unemployment insurance would not "tend to regularize employment."

"That, I think, is quite true," Wood replied. "But an act such as this, where every employer pays ratably forever, does not tend either to prevent or reduce unemployment but on the contrary may aggravate it."

He explained that might result by "making it to the interest of employers to discharge employes who would be taken care of by the unemployment pool."

A decision on the news broadcasting case may be forthcoming December 7.

John W. Davis, attorney for the Associated Press, contended the radio station had "pirated" news from the Bellingham Herald, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the Seattle Times, all members of the press association.

Representing the radio station, William H. Pemberton, Olympia (Wash.) attorney, said the question involved was "whether a news item published in a newspaper has been dedicated to the public and whether a radio station can give excerpts of a news item to the public."

He said the radio station did not broadcast the news until from three to five hours after publication and that if there was any competition it was with the individual newspapers and not with the Associated Press.

"There is no reason," he added, "why news, when once published, cannot be broadcast or otherwise discussed. Especially is this so when there is no charge to the public."

Davis explained the Associated Press was a co-operative organization of newspapers and that radio stations were "competitive solicitors for advertising."

Prize Turkey on Way To White House Table

Salt Lake City, Nov. 11 (AP).—The West's prize gobbler, housed in a donkey-shaped crate, headed today for the Presidential Thanksgiving Day dinner table.

The 35-pound bronze turkey was crowned king of 1,000,000 birds produced by Northwestern Turkey Growers Association members in 14 States. It was grown by Ed Spaulding, of Provo, Utah.

Gov. Henry H. Blood put the turkey in the unique donkey crate, emblem of the Democratic Party, and inclosed greetings to the President.

Customers Never 'Satisfied,' Student-Awakener Declares

Reuben U. Darby, University of Maryland freshman student who earns money for his savings account by waking other dormitory residents in time for breakfast and making their beds, has yet to find his first "satisfied" customer.

When it comes to waking fellows at 7 in the morning, he explained, your "satisfied" customers are few and far between.

Still, Darby admits, business is pretty good. At present he has written contracts with five students.

The contract calls for shutting the customer's window between 4:30 and 5 a. m., turning on the radiator and leaving the key on the table.

At 7 a. m. the student agrees to be awakened.

"This is the tough job," Darby said. "I usually have to wrestle with them."

In addition to these services, Darby agrees to make each student's bed between the hours of 7 and 8:20 in the morning. All these conveniences may be had for the nominal sum of "10 cents per week per room paid at end of month."

Darby, whose home is in Baltimore, is 19. A student of agriculture, he says he goes to bed at 7 p. m., arises at 2 a. m. and studies until time for him to wake his customers.

When it comes to making beds, Darby is something of an artist.

"To make a bed properly," he said, giving a practical demonstration on his roommate's cot, "you ought to box the corners."

Eyeing his work with the air of a professional bed-maker, he said:

"See there. That's what you call a boxed or hospital corner. That keeps you from pulling the covers out if you are a restless sleeper."

It was an impressive demonstration.

Belated Debate.

In reading the arguments before the Supreme Court in the Duke Power Case many citizens probably learned for the first time that the Government is subsidizing municipal power plants in competition with private industry under the guise of relieving unemployment.

Trying to reduce that policy to its fundamentals, Justice Brandeis put this question to the power company's attorneys:

> The Government advances money to relieve unemployment. A possible recipient says we want this money only for this purpose. Now that purpose is to compete with a public utility. What would you think of that?

To this Newton D. Baker replied:

> The Government has no such power to make a loan of that sort . . . It's just as reasonable to say that the Government could relieve distress by making up its mind to set up competing groceries all over the United States.

It is not surprising that this and many similar questions should have been asked and answered. For they grow out of a conflict over vital public policies. They indicate the cleavage between two distinct philosophies of government. The strange thing is that these questions should have been asked for the first time, so far as the public is concerned, before the Supreme Court in a lawsuit directly involving the interests of a single power company.

Obviously these questions should have been asked, and a comprehensive policy on the issues involved should have been developed, in Congress. But neither the House nor the Senate seriously considered the broad implications of the powers which it delegated to the PWA to spend enormous sums on public works, including the "development of water power" and the "transmission of electrical energy." On such generalities the Administration is using public money to undercut utility rates by outright gifts to municipal plants.

It is such questionable procedure which has already given rise to several reverses for the New Deal in the courts. If the Administration intended to use public funds to enter into this form of competition with private enterprise, it should at least have presented its policy to Congress for thorough analysis to be followed by acceptance or rejection on its merits. Instead, it is using emergency relief acts to inaugurate far-reaching changes in the traditional relationship between government and business. This procedure makes a travesty of the boast that we live under a government of laws and not of men.

Britain's Free Hand.

Those Englishmen who have been demanding that Great Britain pursue an isolationist policy in European affairs will be cheered by Sir Samuel Hoare's recent remarks in the House of Commons. Nor will his remarks be overlooked in Germany, which has been bending its diplomatic efforts to secure just that end.

In the course of a debate on defense, the First Lord of the Admiralty made the flat assertion that Great Britain has no definite commitments to send any of its troops across the English Channel. He contrasted this with the situation in 1914, when there was in existence an actual plan of joint military action agreed on between French and British general staffs.

Clearly this implies that Great Britain will follow the course recently charted by Belgium in seeking to maintain neutrality in the event of another European war. Events have evidently caused pronounced revision in the earlier view, expressed by Premier Baldwin, that Britain's eastern frontier is the Rhine. Similarly, Sir Samuel Hoare does not seem to be taking very seriously Britain's commitments as a member of the League of Nations, an organization which, if Anthony Eden is to be believed, Great Britain hopes to strengthen.

What, then, was the significance of Sir Samuel's sensational statement? It indicates that the British government, in an effort to retain as much of a free hand as is possible, intends to avoid binding itself to take any concrete course of action in advance of an actual emergency. While prepared to reassure France and Belgium that Great Britain intends to live up to its obligations under the Locarno Treaty, it does not plan to state specifically how it will do so. As Sir Samuel declared:

"We shall have to judge the situation when it arises, and my own view is that we would be unwise to make either affirmative or negative commitments as to how or where we are going to use an all-purpose force."

To the French, who like advance assurances as to exactly what Great Britain intends to do, this stand of the British government will appear extremely unsatisfactory. The Russians will feel the same way. But in Berlin the declaration will be received with rejoicing as further evidence that the former "ring of steel" around Germany is rapidly dissolving.

Forced Dividends.

Stockholders and workers inured to wage and dividend cuts are rejoicing at the news of special dividend declarations, wage increases and industrial bonuses. Most of them probably take for granted that their good fortune is due to improved business, and it is undoubtedly true that the increased earnings of the current year justify more generous disbursements by many corporations.

A compilation made by the National City Bank of New York, covering 245 companies, shows that net profits totaling $792,000,000 for the first nine months of 1936 were 63.3 per cent higher than during the same period in 1935. Nevertheless, it is generally believed that the tax on undistributed corporate profits has had the decisive influence in forcing the distribution of a larger proportion of net earnings.

The coercive effect of this tax is best realized by considering the position of a corporation which has earned $1,000,000. If it pays out all its profits in the form of dividends it will be liable only for the normal income tax, amounting to approximately $149,000. If it retains half its earnings the tax would amount to nearly $213,000, and if it retained all its earnings, the normal tax plus the new surtaxes would exceed $323,000.

Thus, it is evident that corporate managements are virtually deprived of the discretionary powers which they have heretofore exercised in determining how large a proportion of current earnings should be retained and how much should be paid out to stockholders.

So long as liberal dividend policies are confined to corporations in possession of adequate accumulated reserves, and so long as business expansion continues, potential dangers in the taxation of undistributed profits will not be fully realized. The predictions of the prophets of evils will be delayed until capital is needed for expansion and there are inadequate reserves available for the purpose.

It is a well known fact that fluctuations in profits are much more extreme than changes in production and employment. When business is growing better, operating costs tend to lag behind the rise in gross income and widen profit margins. On the other hand, operating costs tend to overtake and exceed gross income when business is declining. Hence, it is essential that some of the surplus earnings of the good years shall be kept to tide over lean ones, unless the policy of alternate dividend feasts and famines is to prevail. More even distribution of dividends does not merely cushion the shock of depression for investors. It also provides resources for keeping men at work in bad times.

The speculative fillip which the prospect of generous dividend payments is giving to certain classes of stock is thus really an additional argument for careful reconsideration of this unsound tax on undivided profits. Yet President Roosevelt alleges need of revenue as an excuse for delaying action, while he promises at the same time that no new taxes will be considered.

With relief expenditures certain to remain at very high levels during the coming fiscal year, the Administration should be looking about for new sources of taxation to cut down the deficit. And, while it is engaged in that task, ought also to be studying proposals for amending the tax on undistributed corporate earnings.

A Spreading Scandal.

With three officers suspended and the activities of three others under investigation, the entire Police Department of Prince Georges County is under suspicion. Confidence in the county's law enforcement machinery is not likely to be restored until it has undergone a thorough housecleaning.

Unfortunately, exposure of the racket through which a considerable number of motorists have been victimized has brought about a row within the county commission. It was Police Commissioner Cockey who insisted upon the suspension of Frank Bell for an alleged assault upon a motorist last August. At first the commission voted against the suspension and then reversed its attitude. Capt. Cockey's motion that the commissioners investigate the corrupt practices of law enforcement officers was likewise voted down. Commissioner Blandford made a very weak attempt to explain his opposition by asserting that he did not want to "whitewash" the police.

In these circumstances it is gratifying to note that Gov. Nice is showing an active interest in the Prince Georges scandal. Since speeding and driving while drunk are offenses against the State law, there is a clear case for intervention by State officials. Moreover, the clean-up is much more likely to be thorough and impartial if it is conducted with the aid of the State.

All Maryland citizens, quite as much as motorists of the District, are necessarily interested in the outcome. The county commissioners would do well to realize that unless what is called "open banditry" can be speedily stamped out they, too, will be enveloped in a cloud of suspicion and action will have to be taken by the State.

The Community Chest.

One campaign ends and another—for Washington—begins. The annual Community Chest drive for funds is under way. This year the goal is $1,969,000. A budget committee of 75 volunteer citizens estimates this sum to be the minimum with which 65 local welfare agencies can properly accomplish their work during 1937.

For publicity purposes this work has been effectively dramatized as an effort to "arrest" four "public enemies" at large in the city—hunger, disease, crime and despair. Review of the agencies' programs shows the dramatization to be entirely accurate. What is not so readily apparent is the reason why the quota this year exceeds that of last by $212,000. While the growth of the city of course brings increased responsibilities, many people are wondering why initiation of the Federal social security program has not lessened the need for private charity. Nor is this question entirely answered by assurances that Chest agencies do not overlap relief or welfare services supplied by the Government.

In the past year the Social Security Board has paid over sizable sums to the District for relief of the needy aged, for assistance to the blind and for support of dependent children. As yet, however, the system of dispensing this money has not been perfected. This is partly because the board is subjecting each applicant to thorough scrutiny, realizing that it is much easier to get names on Federal relief rolls than to get them off. When the social security program becomes fully effective the loads of 15 local agencies are expected by the Chest to be materially lightened.

There is also some adverse comment on the fact that in spite of the huge bonus payments the Chest continues to allocate a relatively small amount to the American Legion "for personal service to World War veterans and their families." The explanation is that Washington is a mecca for former soldiers in straitened circumstances. They make their way here, often with families and frequently without funds, to apply for pensions or other relief. The assistance extended to these transients by the Legion is said to be very carefully handled. But Chest contributors have the right to ask whether such relief does not encourage continuance of sporadic "bonus marching" which should be stopped now that the bonus issue has been settled.

On the whole, however, it is abundantly clear that the directors of the Chest have taken all Federal grants and subsidies into consideration in drafting their current budget. Further reassurance for critics is found in the knowledge that this year, as before, more than one agency was refused membership in the Chest because its work or organization was not deemed effective.

Washington can respond to Community Chest solicitations with confidence that every dollar asked is honestly needed and that every dollar received will be intelligently spent. That assurance, combined with revived prosperity, should be all that is necessary to make the response as generous as the need is extensive.

Grade Crossings.

There is ample reason for Washingtonians to be pleased over the decision of the Board of Commissioners to eliminate the last main-line grade crossings in the District and to widen the Bladensburg underpass. Yesterday's fatal accident at Berwyn, Md., is grim proof, however, that this problem is far from being solved. In the country as a whole at the end of 1935 there were still 234,231 points at which the paths of locomotives and automobiles cross.

The elimination of grade crossings is one of the most constructive phases of the public works program authorized by Congress a year and a half ago. To date, however, only 370 dangerous intersections of this type have been eliminated with work-relief funds. Fortunately, 1,076 projects are still under construction, and 253 more have been approved. Moreover, tracks and highways are being separated in many cases without the aid of governmental funds. A total of 2,071 dangerous crossings of this type were eliminated last year.

The dark side of the picture is that 887 new grade crossings were created during the same period. Thus the net gain was substantially reduced. Presumably the crossings eliminated were of much greater importance than those added. Nevertheless it is evident that much greater efforts are needed to minimize this source of needless fatalities. At the rate of progress in 1935 more than 234 years would be needed to give motorists full protection against this hazard.

Constitutional Oaths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Within a short time candidates elected to public office will take the usual oath required of them to uphold the Constitution of the United States. That Constitution guarantees, among other things, liberty of conscience, freedom of worship, free speech and assembly and the complete separation of church and state.

All of these are necessary to our well-being as a people, and they are also the essential pillars upon which our free Government rests. All true Americans expect these principles to be upheld in their entirety, regardless of any possible influence, however insidiously used, that would evade them.

AN AMERICAN.

Vote Of Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It occurs to me that we, the people of Washington, owe your paper a vote of thanks and appreciation. The Post's invitation to participate in that magnificent home-coming party for our President and neighbor was indeed a tribute to your paper's ingenuity and leadership.

Doubtless, there were many in that throng of 200,000 who were disappointed at the outcome of the election. Personally, I cannot see how bitterness could survive in the hearts of any who witnessed that soul-stirring spectacle of the people's choice returning in triumph to his home in the White House.

Middle West Reaction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt has won the election by an overwhelming vote. But this does not necessarily mean the minority was in the wrong. The future will decide that. However, records of history show that minorities have been right more often than majorities—the most illustrious example being the crucifixion of Christ by the populace on the Cross at Calvary.

The Middle West is celebrating the defeat of her native son, her first Presidential candidate—and probably her last. She can now once more assume her unprepossessing role as most of her citizens rejoice. The minority again watch and smile.

WILSON ROCKWELL.

Can The Majority Be Wrong?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A writer signing himself "Anti-administration" in The Post of November 9 says "the majority, who are generally ignorant and controlled by their emotions, prejudices and by greed (none of which he, of course, possesses), have been wrong throughout the history of the human race" and therefore he can not accept the results of the recent election. He goes on to say that President Roosevelt has "shown his contempt for our organic law and the Supreme Court."

Our organic law is, I believe, the Constitution, and it provides for the manner in which our President is elected. Is not the irate gentleman in contempt of the Constitution himself when he states that he will not abide by the majority vote of 10,000,000 American citizens?

If the majority is wrong then the "American system," so much extolled and so graciously accepted by Mr. Landon, is wrong. The Constitution is wrong. The Supreme Court, whose decisions are by majority vote, is wrong. And to follow the writer to the logical conclusion, Mr. Landon should be President because 25,000,000 people out of 41,000,000 voted against him.

Q. E. D.
Washington, Nov. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the articles from some of your correspondents in the columns of your paper, I am sorry to see that some of the "die hards" are still unreconciled to the overwhelming defeat of the Republican candidate last week and continue to snipe at the President and his Administration.

Some of the snipers go so far as to intimate that only the ignorant part of the electorate voted for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. Now I am aware that the Republicans own most of the wealth of the country, but I am amazed to find that they have the arrogance to claim a monopoly on the intelligence also. I may be wrong, but I venture the assertion that in proportion to the votes cast, there were as many intelligent persons that voted for Mr. Roosevelt as for Mr. Landon. While on the other hand I am equally as sure that as many poor, ignorant people voted for Mr. Landon, being misguided or coerced by their employers, as ever voted for any candidate in the history of the country.

The essence of democracy is majority rule, so if the die hards are as solicitous for the democratic form of Government and the American way, as they professed to be during the campaign, they will lay aside their petty animosities and prejudices and, instead of trying to combat and sabotage the policies of the Administration, put their shoulders to the wheel. I predict we will have the most prosperous period, for the next four years, in the history of America. At the same time they will prove their patriotism and devotion to American ideals, which ideals have won the respect and admiration of the whole world, in addition to the great indorsement of the people of America themselves.

WELLINGTON SMITH.
Washington, Nov. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am truly sorry for the "die hards" of the recent campaign against the President. Had Mr. Landon won they would have thought the supporters of President Roosevelt poor sports if they had kept on "belly-aching" after the majority of the electorate had spoken. They are in favor of a popular form of Government when their man wins, but when a decision is against them they just can't take it.

Anyone who wants to be fair knows that this election was one of concentrated wealth and its cohorts against the masses. Well, there are more people in the lower brackets than in the upper, and they have voted for a man who they feel will work for the good of the common people and still not destroy those who have initiative. Being of the rich class our President can understand their feelings; at the same time he is a great humanitarian and is not going to permit strong organized groups to make serfs of the millions of poor defenseless workers who are unable to defend themselves.

President Roosevelt is too big to punish his political enemies. All he wants is to see fair play meted out to all. He will, I am sure, steer the ship of state down the middle of the stream and with proper cooperation all can be insured a happier and fuller life.

There is no longer tolerance for ultraconservatism to the detriment of the masses any more than there is any desire on the part of sensible people for radicalism. It is time for the ultraconservatives to get next to themselves and stop this breeding of radicalism in this grand country of ours, by adopting the "Golden Rule" method of doing unto others as they would wish to be done by. A little more of the "Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of Man" policy will do much to alleviate the unrest which has been so prevalent in America in recent years.

Don't worry about the welfare of the country so long as President Roosevelt is at the helm. It is in safe hands. MRS. B. F. GAVIN.
Washington, Nov. 10.

An Independent View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a Democrat by inheritance, but my father did not always vote with the party. He voted for the best man and best policies. Therefore, I suppose I also inherit independence.

We take The Post and so I have read with interest the able editorials of your declaredly independent paper, which has never seemed other than fair and courteous. It may be trite to quote Oliver Wendell Holmes' assertion: "The strength of a nation is in its homes." However, we should be glad President Roosevelt's reassuring statements closing his campaign for re-election were delivered from his home. We can feel more certain that during his regime the Constitution will not be framed and classed with prehistoric relics in the National Museum. I am not familiar with the history of the Roosevelt family, but I think he said it has been here 200 years. I do not imagine it was cumbered with worldly goods on arrival. Nevertheless, they have thrived under the Constitution so as to attain to the Presidency in two instances and to have enough possessions.

Therefore, we must be grateful that he enters upon the weeks preceding his second term with due reverence for the instrument of power which makes such advancement and security possible. We are told the authors of the Constitution took the Magna Charta in some degree as a guide in forming it. The educator explains the Magna Charta owed its existence to the weakness or imbecility of King John, reminding one it is sometimes fortunate that "fools step in where angels fear to tread," for if it did not found the liberties of the English nation it at least defined and settled them and the barons chose 25 of their number to be guardians of the liberties of the realm.

Does not this bear resemblance to our Congress and the judiciary? I could wish our Representatives and Senators always equal to the statesmanship and loyalty required of them in looking to the good of the country. "Early to bed and early to rise" might help them.

I cannot close without referring to the service you did your readers in publishing the article by Sir Willmott Lewis, of the London Times, entitled "As Others See Us," in The Post of November 3. It has been very clarifying to this woman voter regarding our population.

L. E. MITCHELL.

Underpaid Guards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As there is generally a space in your paper for its readers to comment and express their views, I am sure you will be considerate enough to give one of the many forgotten men an inch or two; meaning, of course, the Federal guards.

While the President is endeavoring to raise the living standard and salaries of workers in private industry, I am sure he is not aware of the inadequate salaries paid for the indispensable services of these "valiant stalwarts" of the Government service.

There are guards who have been working for the Government for years, and carrying out their many duties efficiently, who are blessed with large families, but hardly draw enough salary for the upkeep of themselves.

Now the cost of living is higher than it has been for years, and the Agriculture Department predicts that it will continue to mount. Will you not devote a little of your time and paper to help get a higher wage than $96.80 in cash per month for these men? I am confident that you could not render a service that would be appreciated more by a good many families in and around the District.

I feel sure that if the President was aware of the conditions, and facts, surrounding this great body of fine men, he would not only try to better the working conditions and salaries of workers in private industry, but would set an example by endeavoring to aid his own underpaid servants as well.

The Post Impressionist

Old Things and New.

WHEN Miss Gloria Chandler, field representative of the children's theater department of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, said in Washington the other day that "Children, unlike adults, appreciate the theater most if they know what they are about to see" her only mistake was in including the words, "unlike adults." We are all alike in that respect from the cradle to the grave.

The first play I ever saw, my first "regular" play, was "L'Assomoir; or the Curse of Drink." All I remember of it is a horrible scene of a man and a bottle and the memory is not a pleasant one. My childish thought was that such things should not be acted on the stage; and that pantomimes were ever so much nicer. I still think so.

There is an old saying that all things come in threes. All perfect works of nature, all perfect works of art, have a beginning, a middle and an end; and each, to be enjoyed in its fullness, must be the center of a larger three, Anticipation, Realization, Retrospection. If you have been robbed of the first you have been cheated.

* * * *

That is why (I may remark in passing) I abominate surprise parties. I knew how I would feel if I were the victim. (Are surprise parties as common as they used to be?) And, by the same token, if the second act of the larger play is something beyond the ken of all my previous experience, I have been treated just as badly. And this last is precisely the case, as Miss Chandler points out, of the very young child taken to the theater for the first time.

There is something abnormal about the thrill hunter. It is not in human nature to enjoy shocks. What we call the element of surprise, the pleasurable element of surprise, is ever some slightly new angle on some old familiar theme. Anticipation, therefore, based on familiarity, expects some titillant surprise and enjoys it when it arrives.

This, of course, is no hard and fast rule; but it is a notable characteristic of our common clay.

In plain words, all the days of his life a man feels in his heart that old things are best, but not until he is no longer young does he reduce that feeling to a formula and admit its truth. Youth is forever seeking something new where there is nothing new; and in that search, while committing follies innumerable, occasionally stumbles upon an old truth which static Age had wholly forgotten and could never hope to find. Youth is equipped with 10-league boots; Age knows the greater comfort of a pair of old shoes; but both in their heart of hearts are exactly like the little toddler who wants you to tell him the same story over and over again. That story is an old story to him and therefore dear.

For the old things endure; and the new things that are worth while grow old and survive; and what virtue there is in newness passes with the years.

(Consider the old songs. Who remembers "Champagne Charley" and "Not for Jo?" Nobody, save some old codger who would be willing to forget them. But "Annie Laurie" and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" go singing down the ages.)

And so we find Francis Bacon quoting Alonso of Aragon, one old man approving another, to the effect that age appears best in four things: old wood to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust, and old authors to read; Goldsmith added old times and old manners; Benjamin Franklin, old wives. Any old mouse would add old cheese. Not to mention the fact that old dog Tray is ever faithful.

I am no authority on old wine, but I can wax lyrical over old ale. I know of no more pleasant thing than to quaff old ale, puff an old pipe, and talk with a couple or old friends. I say a couple because, as a Marathon philosopher has pointed out, three is exactly the right number for improving conversation. Threes again!

But not one of the old philosophers that I know anything about has a word to say about old jokes; and this is a serious oversight. Each and every one of us has some old favorite, of a rich and chestnutty flavor, which we never tire of telling. Your wife knows that one and she shakes an admonitory finger when she sees it trembling on your lips.

And never doubt that the old jokes are enjoyed by those who listen to them. Some 20-odd years ago a well-known comedian (I think it was Seabrooke and it may have been in "The Isle of Champagne") thought it would be a good line to run off a string of the oldest jokes he could think of, beginning with the conundrum, "Why does a chicken cross the road?" By and by, he thought, the people who listen will begin to see the absurdity of it all and it will be good for a laugh. Well, it got the laugh all right, but not for the reason he had supposed. His auditors never noticed the absurdity; what they enjoyed were the jokes. They thought they were darned good jokes; and they were, too; why, ever so many of them were old friends. And that is why children like Cinderella.

Yea, bo! We love the old, familiar things. Why, some of us, even those among us who are disgustingly pernickety in our manner of speech, will persist in using old, familiar phrases even when the idea we wish to convey might better be expressed in some other way. In other words, in other words.

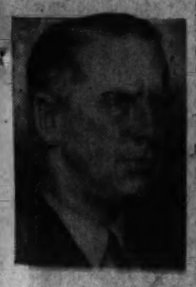
Election Bets.

These dispatches desire to report the receipt of a check for $35 from Mr. Freddie Lieb, the old-fashioned ear-to-the-grounder, who picked many winners of pennants and world series during his quarter century as a leading baseball journalist in New York. Mr. Lieb picked Mr. Landon to win the recent solemn referendum, using the ear-to-the-ground method of selection—which was an unfortunate departure from the sound, if somewhat obscure, statistics in which he placed his trust when he was writing baseball.



He gave even money, and your correspondent tried earnestly to shoo him into the vicinity of the gentlemen on the copy desk of the Times-Dispatch in Richmond, Va., when he was driving from New York to St. Petersburg, Fla., to cast his ballot.

As may be noted from the size of the check, your correspondent was faithful to the game conservation policy, and merely pinked a little fuzz from this Republican. In the rather obstreperous state of mind which possessed Mr. Lieb at world series time it would have been possible to blow him to tatters, for he was so aggressive that he did not hide but boldly broke cover and glared right down the barrel of the gun.

* * * *

Mr. Jack Randolph, of the copy desk of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, seems slightly embittered by your correspondent's failure to deliver Mr. Lieb. Your correspondent had promised that the old-fashioned ear-to-the-grounder would appear on the courthouse steps in Richmond and publicly defy the Democrats to cover his wagers at even money.

"I questioned all the gentlemen whose business it is to hang out on the courthouse steps," Mr. Randolph writes, "and they report that the crowd was so large, waiting for Mr. Lieb to appear, that he may have been unable to get within three blocks of the place. As Richmond has the most persistent corps of courthouse steps loungers in the East, I am forced to conclude that he did not get through.

"So we did not have a very good season down here, and I am inclined to blame you for giving too much publicity to Mr. Lieb's trip through Richmond.

"Two old ladies did phone the office to ask for the fellow who wanted to bet on Roosevelt. But before I could grab the phone Dick Payne, who sits next to me, had wheedled them out of even money in one case and four to five in another. It did not seem quite ethical to me, but he took the position that they were looking for bets and did not care whose money it was.

* * * *

"We barely missed a very fine prize. One of our men was very anxious to cut up his father, a broker, and had needled him into a few angry wagers. He remarked that the Landon people apparently weren't backing their man, and said this timidity reacted against the candidate. He had his father all ready when he made a clumsy slip. He said Wall Street didn't seem to like Landon's chances, and at that the old gentleman jumped out of the car in the middle of traffic and wasn't seen until the morning of the fourth.

"In the end the office boys took the most money. They collected every pool on the electoral vote, all guessing over 500."

Mr. Lieb's covering letter is encouraging, for it bespeaks that optimism which must be encouraged in Republicans if there is to be any sport needling them next time. He points out that Mr. Landon did carry his (Mr. Lieb's) district in St. Petersburg, 144 to 104, and perhaps it would be contrary to the best interests of the sport of needling Republicans to point out that the party's total in the State was so small that it lost its major league franchise. Henceforth in Florida the Republican Party will play in semipro leagues along with the Prohibitionists, Socialists and Communists.

* * * *

"I am afraid," says he, "that John Hamilton was a Travis Jackson on third base for our side, and that Mr. Funk, of the Literary Digest, was a Bill Terry, with Al Smith pitching. And did Al throw them a home-run ball when he made that duPont Liberty League speech last winter? Or was it a screw ball?"

Your correspondent has just had the tragic experience of returning to Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., a check for $50. On the train bound for the Republican convention in Cleveland the Republicans were very aggressive, and your correspondent plucked several tufts of fuzz. But someone else must have plucked Col. Roosevelt, for he was not in your correspondent's book—more's the pity.

Oh, well, into each life some rain must fall.

Spirit Of Geneva

Oserver Says High Hopes And Enthusiasm Once Aroused By League Have Declined, But Organization Anything But Dead.

By Bertram Pickard.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THOSE OF US who live in Geneva become habituated to an overcast sky, in the physical sense. But it is harder to acclimatize oneself to the political and psychological clouds that have settled over Geneva in recent years; so persistently, moreover, that the spiritual climate of the seat of the League has been radically changed.

Time was when the "spirit of Geneva" was a phrase to conjure with; when the "Geneva atmosphere" was synonymous with hope, inspiration, international good will and understanding. That famous "atmosphere" was admirably portrailed some years ago by Robert de Traz, a well-known Swiss writer, in his "L'Esprit de Geneve," first published in French and later in English under the title of "The Spirit of Geneva."

Another book, just out, "Geneva Scene" by Mr. Norman Hillson, a former League correspondent, might suitably have been styled, as one reviewer suggested, "League Epitaph," packed, as it is, with a record of lost opportunities, shattered hopes, and shady politics.

The gulf between these two books measures the change that has come over the "spirit of Geneva" in a decade. Only those of us who can vividly recall the thrilling accents of Aristide Briand's voice as he welcomed the Germans in 1926, and have also ringing in our ears the shameful demonstration of the Italian journalists in 1936, are able to feel the full poignancy of that metamorphosis.

One ventures to think, however, that the change is greater than the facts warrant. There was a measure of illusion in the "spirit of Geneva" of yesterday; whilst today's Geneva "atmosphere" has been befogged, to some degree, by the noxious vapors of a corresponding disillusionment.

The "spirit of Geneva" was, and is, conditioned by four chief factors: (1) the influence of local geography and history upon the seat of the League; (2) the contribution of organized public opinion; (3) the influence of the Secretariat; (4) lastly, the contribution of governments through their characteristic behavior at Geneva.

The Geneva climate, after all, remains a constantly inconstant factor. To read Mr. Hillson you might think that one-half of the League's troubles were attributable to Calvin, and the other half to the notorious bise, a bitter north wind that sweeps down the lake from Lausanne. As one who has survived the bise for a decade, and has also intimate experience of London fogs, and British weather generally, the present writer does not hesitate to acquit the Geneva climate of the charges brought against it.

* * * *

Factor Of Public Opinion Important.

READING de Traz, on the other hand, you might be led to think that the League was neither more nor less than a consummation of Genevese history. There are strong spiritual links between Calvin's Reform, de Sellon's Peace Society, Dunant's Red Cross, and Wilson's League of Nations. But this connection must not be pushed too far. The League is not dependent upon local traditions. But neither is it "cribbed, cabinned and confined" by the local setting.

The factor of organized public opinion is much more important. The birth of the League, coming as it did at the close of the "war to end war," was hailed as though it held the promise of a new heaven and a new earth. A veritable "mystique"—as the French say—developed in connection with the League, especially in England, though the same Anglo-Saxon idealism was actively at work across the Atlantic, checked, of course, by the nonadherence of the United States.

Geneva became a place of pilgrimage, especially in the summer and early autumn, so that the League's annual assemblies in September were conducted in the presence of an admiring and enthusiastic audience who saw pretty much what they came to see.

The League being, in principle, so revolutionary an institution, it was inevitable that the organized public opinion which took it seriously was composed in the main of people with an unusual dose of imagination and adaptability. The prophets and pioneers—great and small—were among these, but also the cranks!

In those days, when the so-called "realists" ignored Geneva, the League had a good, if limited, press. Only later, from 1925 on, when foreign offices woke up to the importance of the League, did newspapers think it necessary to belittle the "spirit of Geneva."

Geneva journalists are not wicked—far from it. They often manifest much professional solidarity and genuine interest in the League. But the propaganda proclivities of a large section of the press, under influence of particular governments or sectional "interests," inevitably breed misunderstanding, suspicion and even animosity in League circles.

Government Pressure Felt In Secretariat.

THE SECRETARIAT has often, and justly, been highly praised. Sir Eric Drummond and his original colleagues created something new in temper and technique. An important role in this first international civil service was played by a number of higher officials whose experience was educational rather than bureaucratic. The Secretariat was efficient, and it had a soul. The "spirit of Geneva" emanated, in no small degree, from these men and women of very varied experience, who had become a team at work on a creative job. But when the foreign offices of the great powers put their calculating hands upon the League, the character of the Secretariat changed through the steady infiltration of bureaucrats with a dominantly national viewpoint. The temperature of the Geneva "atmosphere" fell accordingly.

To begin with, the League was largely cold-shouldered, or forgotten, by the great powers. The Assembly, particularly, came under the leadership of men, e. g., Lord Cecil, Nansen, Branting, rather than governments—men who knew their Covenant and exploited its possibilities to the full.

When, about 1925, the foreign offices realized that a curiously pervasive influence was growing up, out of their direct control, foreign ministers (and their permanent officials) flocked to Geneva in force. Lip service to the League entered a new and brilliant phase. But, during the succeeding years, principle and practice drifted steadily apart, until even the sentimentalists could see that something was wrong somewhere!

The trouble was, of course, that though the League constituted a big change in method, there had been little change of heart, so far as the politics of power were concerned. Presently it became impossible to hide the glaring discrepancies between profession and performance. During the Sino-Japanese affair supreme legal agility could not disguise the fact that not only had Japan violated the Covenant, but no other great power was ready to apply it, either. Japan defied the League, and walked out. Walking out became the vogue at Geneva: first Germany, then Italy, in a modified form.

Meanwhile the Disarmament Conference had talked itself to a standstill, disproving the Geneva maxim that, once round a table, governments always agree in the end.

* * * *

It is clear that, to a considerable extent, the Geneva "atmosphere" of the early years was an exotic growth, developed, as it were, in vacuo, apart from the continuing political and economic realities of the post-war world.

When the Old Adam of power politics, quiescent through the weakness of some states, and the weariness of all, bestirred himself again, the League tended to become, first a battleground, then a machine to be captured, if possible, by certain states for particular ends.

One says "tended" advisedly. Because the recent Assembly showed that there is still a group of states and statesmen who are consciously resisting that tendency, in their own interest no doubt, but also in the interest of a wider vision and purpose.

They are, today, the guardians of the true "spirit of Geneva"—the spirit, that is, of mutual accommodation and aid. That spirit is not dead; and, despite all its weakness, the League yet provides the indispensable machinery for permanent consultation, and for the co-ordination of effort.

When, with due historical perspective, public opinion recognizes the large element of illusion that suffused the international scene for a decade after the war, it will perhaps discover that present realities hold out hope as well as horror.

In which case a new "spirit of Geneva" may arise from the wreckage of the old.

Hope Survives

By Barnet Nover

Through The Lengthening Years.

THE OBSERVANCE, yesterday, of the eighteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice was, on the whole, conducted in a very pessimistic spirit. The crash of masonry and the shrieks of the wounded and dying at Madrid provided a discordant and sinister obligato to the prayers and supplications for peace that arose from innumerable hearts and altars.

Time has written a grim commentary on those high hopes which sustained mankind through the four bitter years of bloodshed and devastation. A "war to end war," a world "made safe for democracy," a "peace of justice"—these and other once lovely flowers of optimism and idealism have long since become stale and withered. A generation has grown up which knows them only as faint memories of a forgotten past.

The world since 1918 has been a far less pleasant world than that which seemed so certain of coming into being on that glorious November day 18 years ago when tightly repressed emotions blew the lid and mankind gave itself over to the emotional intoxication of peace.

* * * *

IT IS SO EASY to contrast the realities of the present with the dreams of that rapidly vanishing past, to the latter's complete disparagement. But it is, at best, a futile performance. It has become abundantly clear to us that progress is anything but automatic, that mankind can go backward as well as forward—and much more rapidly.

Indeed, we are by no means as sure as were men of past generations that there is any such thing as progress at all except in a material sense. Materially, despite political tensions, wars, rumors of wars, depressions, social and economic disturbances of great magnitude, we have during these past 18 years continued to go forward. But there has been no parallel advance in the field of institutions designed to eliminate those twin scourges of war and want. And so far as man's spiritual life is concerned, it is certainly possible to argue that instead of progress these years have seen very definite regression.

More than once, of late, the world has witnessed the sorry spectacle of a nation reverting to practices which would have caused our ancestors to blush with shame. Indeed, so frequent have been these reversions to barbarism and savagery these last years that we have come to accept them, almost without protest, as a natural and inevitable part of the scene.

* * * *

WHAT did the world profit from the war?

It is undeniable that certain nations did make gains as such gains are reckoned, i. e., in square miles of territory added, in thousands or millions of willing or unwilling new citizens added to the total population.

Yet the defeated nations have never become reconciled to all the losses of territory they sustained. On the contrary, the drive for treaty revision, which hitherto has emphasized such intangibles as the right to arms equality and freedom from restrictions imposed from without, is now, more and more, emphasizing the necessity of territorial changes. But, since no nation is prepared to give up, without a struggle, any of the land it now holds, this very process seems to bring war nearer. In the long run it may very well prove to be the case that many of the alleged gains were illusory.

* * * *

WERE ALL the other alleged gains, those of a more general nature, also illusory? Was it too much to expect that the example of the sheer wastefulness of war in human and material values would so impress itself on the minds of men that they would permit no obstacles to stand in the way of building a new world order founded on permanent peace?

Many will reply to these questions in the affirmative. We are back, they say, to where we were before. Once again, as in 1914, are we poised on the edge of an abyss. Once again, as in the terrible summer of that year, is the world at the mercy of an incident.

But the parallel is by no means justified. The world is actually far different from what it was 22 years ago. The constant shift in alliances, ententes and understandings that has been going on during recent years, the absence of fixed foci such as were clearly present in 1914, prove the parallel to be faulty. There is an entirely new complication to be found in the existence of armed philosophies such as communism and fascism. To strengthen the regimes they represent, the proponents of these creeds seek to create an alliance of classes transcending national frontiers. All these factors, and one other of transcendant importance, indicate that the general situation today does differ in marked degree from what it was before the outbreak of the World War.

That other difference is the fact that these 18 years have been years of experimentation in international co-operation for peace. It happens that the experiments have been anything but a marked success. Many insist they have been complete failures. But as long as the instruments that were forged out of the hopes of mankind during and after the war remain they can be used. There is hope in their survival. No wars are inevitable except those that have already been fought. At least now, in contrast to 1914, the machinery exists to make peace enduring.

Years after the French Revolution the Abbe Sieyes was asked what he had done during the grim months of the Terror. "I lived," he said. That in itself was an accomplishment. When the history of this era is written it may also be said in praise of the League of Nations, the World Court and those other instruments of peace, that they survived the turmoil of the postwar years and were available when men regained their senses. Even in their present battered state they still represent the hope and reason of mankind in a disorderly world. As long as they remain, hope remains.

"Old Man"

By William Lyon Phelps

Walpole, Author.

Before he was 30 years old, Hugh Walpole made an international reputation with his first novel, called "Fortitude." Among the greatest writers of English novels, only Dickens made a reputation before he was 30. We do not yet know whether or not Mr. Walpole belongs in that immortal company, but if any list of leading living writers of English he would stand high.

His latest novel is called "A Prayer for My Son," and is published by Doubleday, Doran Co., New York. It is neither a long nor a short novel, but of average size.

* * * *

The leading character is a devilish old man. I think Mr. Walpole is unique among novelists in his fondness for creating tremendously formidable old men and women. Ordinarily, when one reaches an age of physical decline, one is apt to suffer also a decline in influence, or anyhow in personal effectiveness. In a household filled with young or middle-aged people, the aged are hardly more than tolerated; are not regarded as seriously as they perhaps were in their prime.

But in a number of his novels Hugh Walpole has given us an old woman who is absolutely terrifying: every one is afraid of her. I have always thought that when Mr. Walpole was a small boy some aged female scared the life out of him; but when I put this question directly to him, he burst out laughing, which was the only answer I got, and which was ambiguous.

In this latest novel, it is an old man who is the protagonist, who runs the household, who pulls the strings. Young men and maidens are mortally afraid of him. And he is so cheerful, always laughing!

This story increases in intensity so that the last 80 pages are almost unbearably exciting.

* * * *

I like Mr. Walpole's realistic modern novels far more than I like his historical ones. I think "The Green Mirror," "The Old Ladies," and "A Prayer for My Son" are worth all the Rogue Herries narratives many times over.

Action by U. S. Hinted if Stock Rise Warrants

SEC and Reserve Board Staff Keeping Watch for 'Runaway.'

Government agencies charged with supervision of credit and stock market control are vigilantly watching the current stock market boom, and would wield all of their powers if necessary to prevent an injurious run-away, it was indicated here yesterday.

Various factors in the stock market picture are being carefully analyzed by both Securities and Exchange Commission and Federal Reserve Board staffs. If there is any evidence of manipulation or credit expansion, so familiar in the late 20's, neither group has given any hint of it.

SEC officials are said to feel that doubling of stock values in the last 19-month spurt warrants closest surveillance. Federal regulations covering pegging, fixing and stabilization of stock values are being moved into shape and soon will be passed upon by the SEC.

Violation Discovered.

The commission has discovered violation of "margin" regulations covering customers accounts by two New York Stock Exchange firms, it was said. The information was reported turned over to the business conduct committee of the exchange, which was said to have acted to discipline the firms.

Administrative problems of the Securities and Exchange Commission were discussed with the President yesterday by James M. Landis, chairman of the commission, but it could not be learned whether the stock market figured in the talk.

It is understood that no new legislation is now anticipated. Landis is reported to believe that administration of the two security laws is proceeding smoothly and existing powers are sufficient.

Six-Year Highs.

Factors in the stock market picture under scrutiny by reserve board and commission officials are said to include six-year highs in industry, trade and finance, and excess reserves of member banks still over $2,000,000,000, indicative of easy money conditions, in addition to doubling of stock values. Tying into the picture are declarations of extra dividends by some of the larger companies, a possible result of the new undistributed earnings tax.

Apparently the SEC would like to avoid the question of evaluation of stocks, although some economists have said the rise in stock values is ahead of business recovery.

New Financing Watched.

Any increase in new financing will be watched here with interest. Most of the recent financing has been of a refunding nature, and one view here is that the limited number of issues available may be one factor in the present rising market. Some increase in borrowing for business expansion purposes is believed inevitable, and additional new issues, it was said, might ease present conditions.

Keeping Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and his associates informed on stock market developments is Dr. Carl E. Parry, chief of the division of security loans. The board has supervision over extension of credit for stock purchases.

Conference Arranged.

A conference slated next Wednesday between Landis and New York Stock Exchange officials, on the SEC program to limit trading activity of members and partners of the exchange, may have some effect on the future character of the stock market.

Primarily, the conference is designed to open discussions on putting into effect a preliminary separation of the broker and dealer functions on stock exchanges. The SEC last session advised Congress it proposed to reclassify floor traders and partner trading through credit restrictions—part of a broader program in which the commission is seeking to determine whether it should completely separate the dual functions of broker and dealer. Under present procedure, exchange members may be active in a dual capacity, serving as brokers for other persons, and buying and selling securities for their own account.

Chinese Urge All Foreigners Quit War Zone

Notes Sent Diplomats Hold Further Fighting Likely in Three Provinces.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Nov. 11.—The Chinese government today asked immediate evacuation of all foreigners from northwest China, where an attack of 30,000 Manchukuoan and Mongol troops was reported.

(The attack was reported repulsed in Suiyuan Province, one of the districts from which the government urged evacuation.)

The government said notes had been sent all governments maintaining diplomatic relations with China asking them to urge their nationals to leave Suiyuan, Ningsia and Tsinghai provinces and "also some parts of inner Mongolia under separate Mongolian jurisdiction."

Visas will not be issued to additional foreigners to enter the provinces named, the government said, because "Chinese authorities will not be responsible for protection of foreigners" in the areas.

Suiyuan and Kansu provinces hold the majority of Americans in northwest China.

(At Peiping it was reported the Manchukuoan and Mongol attackers sought to invade the province, using planes, armored cars and tanks. The reports did not estimate casualties, but said two airplanes alleged to be of Japanese manufacture were forced down near Taolin, where the fighting was reported to have centered.

(Residents of the province, reports from Kalgan, Chahar, said, resisted what they viewed as an effort to extend the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchukuo westward.)

A spokesman for the United States Embassy said the Chinese note was received and forwarded to Washington.

He emphasized that United States authorities are not authorized to "order" nationals to evacuate, but said that whenever conditions in the interior of China warrant they keep nationals advised and often urge evacuation as a precautionary measure.

The Japanese Embassy announced it could "not accept the note on face value. There must be some ulterior motive, but we are forwarding it to Tokyo."

A Chinese official frankly stated tonight that "we are forced to take a strong stand to show that China still controls inner Mongolia. We expect strong reaction from some quarters, but we cannot allow bandits or any others with tanks and airplanes to push into our provinces."

Japanese Sailor Slain.

Shanghai, Nov. 11 (AP).—Gunfire added another international incident tonight to the steadily growing list of Japanese slain on Chinese soil.

An unidentified gunman shot and killed Yasuji Takase, member of the crew of the Japanese Kasagi Maru, and at once a platoon of Japanese marines dashed to the scene of the killing, in the heart of the Japanese cotton mill district within the International Settlement. They were armed with pistols, rifles and machine guns.

All houses and alleyways in the area were searched by the marines, but they failed to find the killer.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills. They are successful by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"ARREST" DISEASE!

If you were a nurse—if you worked 8 hours per day every day, allowing one hour a visit—it would take you 65 years, 8 months and 7 days to make the 191,776 Home visits made by the Instructive Visiting Nurses in 1935.

Thousands receive hospital, bed, board and nursing care with Chest dollars at Georgetown Hospital, George Washington University Hospital, Columbia Hospital for Women, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat, Emergency, Garfield Memorial, Providence, National Homeopathic and Children's Hospitals.

Full diagnostic service (preventive and curative) is rendered daily in the nine Community Chest Hospitals.

Public Enemy Number 1

Disease, striking viciously at the poor and helpless, at children and adults weakened by adversity, makes no distinctions of race, color, sex or age.

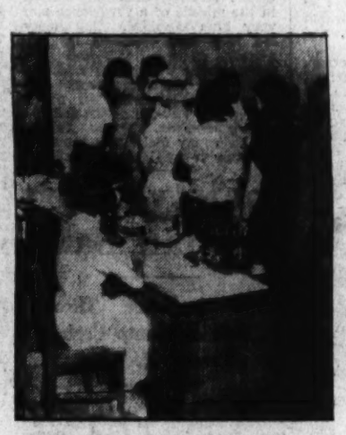
It takes its toll not only from the poor, but from you and yours in every part of the community. For selfish as well as humane reasons, Disease must be Arrested.

Your gifts restore health and strength to little children. They relieve the suffering of both young and old. Without your help, the toll of suffering would be infinitely greater.

You make available free clinics for heart disease and cancer, clinics to keep well children well, clinics for women who are to bear children. You provide nursing service in the homes of the needy, hospital service for the sick who cannot pay the full cost of the services they so sorely need.

These things are vital now more than ever before. Years of depression have left their mark upon the health of people. If people are to live securely—marry and rear healthy children—these essential services must not cease. DISEASE MUST BE ARRESTED!

Free surgery at the hands of masters made possible by facilities provided for the helpless with your Community Chest dollars.



Every 4½ minutes of every working day your Chest Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals issues one free clinic pass (for bodily treatment) to persons unable to pay.

John Farr Simmons Weds Caroline Huston Thompson; Hundreds of Guests Attend Reception in Sulgrave Club

Bride Wears Grandmother's Bridal Gown As Friends, Family Attend.

Couple to Honeymoon in Mexico, Reside in Old Home Here.

By Dudley Harmon.

In the presence of members of the two families and friends, Miss Caroline Huston Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, was married yesterday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock to Mr. John Farr Simmons, son of Mrs. Edwin S. Simmons, of New York and Washington. The ceremony took place in the Sulgrave Club, the Rev. Albert McCartney officiating.

The wedding ceremony was performed before an improvised altar banked with palms and chrysanthemums. Yellow tapers burned in candelabra against the walls and on all tables were vases of flowers.

The bride wore the wedding gown of her grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Huston Thompson, who came from Pittsburgh for the wedding. The 70-year-old gown was of white chiffon over a taffeta slip, which had a wide-plaited ruffle at the hem. Bands of white satin trimmed the skirt and wide flowing sleeves of chiffon. The bride's veil fell from a coronet of gardenias, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

She was given in marriage by her father, and her only attendant was Miss Olivia Stokes, daughter of Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes. Miss Stokes wore a floor-length frock of gold satin damask made with a full skirt and a jabot of old lace. Mr. Donald Simmons, of New York, served as his brother's best man.

Many at Reception.

Hundreds of guests gathered at the Sulgrave Club for the reception following the ceremony. Practically every circle of Washington society was represented, as the bride's father has long been prominent in the Capital and Mrs. Simmons, as chief of the visa division of the State Department, has many friends here. The clubrooms were decorated with palms and autumn flowers, and on the dining room table was a large doll, dressed in bridal clothes, given to the bride's mother when she was a child.

The parents of the bride and Mrs. Simmons, the bridegroom's mother, received with the young couple. Mrs. Thompson wore a gown of gray chiffon trimmed with tiers of lace and a gray hat, and Mrs. Simmons wore a frock of beige crepe and a brown hat with an ostrich feather.

Many guests from out of town were present, including Mrs. Fosdick Jones, of Pasadena, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. John Morey, of Denver, Colo., former home of the bride's parents; Mrs. Marshall Thompson, of Pittsburgh, and Mr. and Mrs. Waddell Smith, of Princeton, N. J.

Ropers Attend.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were among the early arrivals, Mrs. Roper wearing a black velvet gown with a hat of matching shade. Among the representatives from the State Department were Mr. and Mrs. John Carter Vincent, Mr. Sheldon Thomas, and Mr. Paul Daniels.

Many from the diplomatic set were present, including Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the Germany Embassy; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Frank Heywood, Mr. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, of the British Embassy; Mr. Edward Kulikowski, of the Polish Embassy; Dr. Ernst Meyer, First Secretary of the German Embassy, and Mme. Lombard, wife of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy.

Others present included Mrs. Brice Clagett, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Snodgrass, Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mr. Denys Smith, Mr. Clarence Hewes, the Second Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Struve, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Walter White.

Mr. Harry Villard, of the State Department, was being greeted by friends on all sides who were welcoming him back to Washington. He stopped on his way back to his post in Rio de Janeiro, from New York, where he has been visiting his mother.

Friends at Ceremony.

Many members of the younger set, friends of the bride, were present yesterday. They included Miss Anne-Carter Greene, Mr. Mannix Walker, the Misses Elsie and Christine Ekengren, the latter recently returned from Kentucky; Miss Eleanor Powell, Miss Cecil Jones, Miss Rosalind Wright, Miss Elizabeth Morton, Miss Barbara Donald, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mr. Oliver Gasch, Miss Betty Hardie and Miss Mary Cowles.

Others there included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Eliot, Mr. and Mrs. William Meade Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. John Farnham and Mrs. Bowler Hull.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left for a honeymoon in Mexico, from which they will return by boat. They will reside in an old house at 1420 Thirty-third street, which they are in the process of remodeling. The bride chose as her traveling costume a black wool suit trimmed with Persian lamb, with which she wore a black felt hat.

Mrs. Simmons made her debut in Washington several seasons ago and has been active in Junior League work. She attended the Madeira School and Bryn Mawr College. Mr. Simmons is a graduate of Princeton and has served in numerous diplomatic posts abroad, including Vienna, Cologne, Paris and Latvia.

Hessler-Henderson.

Miss Mary Hall Wed To James Carey 3d.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Carter Hall was the scene yesterday of the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mary Lewis Hall, to Mr. James Carey 3d, of Baltimore, son of Mrs. Anthony Morris Carey and the late Mrs. Carey. Dr. William B. McIlwaine, of Alexandria, was the officiating clergyman.

Mr. Hall gave his daughter in marriage. She was gowned in King's blue crepe and small matching hat. Her corsage was of green orchids. Mrs. William Laird Dunlop 3d, in garnet velvet gown, small black hat and carrying African cream daisies, was matron of honor. The maid of honor was Miss Katherine Braxton Hall, dressed in silver lame, a small black hat and also carrying African daisies.

For best man, Mr. Carey had his brother, Mr. G. Cheston Carey, and, as his usher, another brother, Mr. Anthony Morris Carey.

Only members of the families and a few friends attended the wedding and reception at the Hall home, which was decorated with talisman roses, snapdragons and maiden hair fern.

The bride's traveling dress was of green crepe, over which she wore a moleskin jacket which had hat to match. The couple will live in Baltimore after a wedding trip.

'Grid Special' Runs Saturday

A "Princeton-Yale" special will pull out of Union Station Saturday morning filled with members of society bound for Princeton and the game between the two universities. One of the largest parties aboard will be that organized by Viscount Henri de Sibour, a Yale graduate who each year charters a car to attend this particular game.

Among those in the party will be Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, who will have with them several guests; Mr. and Mrs. Clement Dunn, Mrs. Bowler Hull, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Mrs. McKeldin Tucker and Mr. Henry Thorn, whose engagement has been rumored; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Llewellyn, of Warrenton; Mr. Lawrence Baker, Mr. Edward Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. Emmons Smith, Mr. Morgan McConihe and Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

A long and shining motor drew up in front of the Carlton yesterday afternoon and almost before the doorman could jump to open the door, who should alight but Noel Coward. In two seconds he was out of his heavy coat, which he tossed to the chauffeur, and into the hotel.

An exceedingly nice person, who is so unaffected, it seemed almost impossible he could be the same one who had scored such tremendous successes. He paused to talk for a brief moment and then hurried on to meet Alan Webb in the cocktail lounge, however, not before we had time to see that his eyes are a very dark blue instead of black as they appear from the stage.

In the lounge he and his confrere, both having been golfing, were attired in leather jackets and soft tweeds and sat discussing their plays of last evening entirely unmindful of the many about who gazed at them with frank interest.

Completely oblivious of the noise, hustle and bustle about them, Andrei Popovici, of the Rumanian Legation, and Alexander Papana, captain of the Royal Air Forces of the up and coming Balkan monarchy, were lunching and conversing intently.

A very interesting looking pair, the diplomat, who is fair with piercing blue eyes, and his flier companion, dark with flashing brown eyes.

The young officer, who by the way, is the son of Gen. Papana, and is the former stunt flier of his homeland, is over here for a brief visit and has been taking in all of the air meets and anything and everything pertaining to travels in the ozone. His own special plane, which is with him everywhere he goes, was given a rare treat coming over, because he brought it on the Hindenburg, thus giving the little bus a chance to see how it feels to fly.

Mme. Papana will arrive sometime next week, coming on the Bremen.

Helen Drury is particularly delighted because her sister, Kitty, with her husband, Stephen Burke, have come to Washington to make their home after living in West Virginia, where Stephen was dean at the university. They decided to take a home in Wesley Heights and are nearly settled in it.

Helen is now making plans for a very scrumptious luncheon which she will give a week from tomorrow in honor of little Bette Hartz.

Well, Washington does not know just how near one of its favorite belles came to eloping while in New York last weekend. No, no names this time.

Speaking of elopements and engagements, Janet Gray is wearing a very handsome Navy miniature of platinum with a bright flashing diamond nestled in the middle of a very large and very blue sapphire. The lucky lad is a first classman at Annapolis, so we hear, and that means there will be no wedding plans or announcements for sometime, what with the naval ruling of a two-year wait following graduation, before future admirals may make that momentous trip to and from the altar.

Middleburg Hunt Races Are Staged

Society Gathers at Meet Held on Estate of D. C. Sands.

By Grace Brooks.

A real racing atmosphere enveloped Middleburg yesterday as the fall race meet of the Middleburg Hunt opened at the beautiful Glenwood race course on the estate of Mr. D. C. Sands. The second day's races on Saturday will conclude the program.

Thousands from nearby districts gathered in the large grandstand which overlooks the entire Glenwood course, to watch the satin-coated steeplechasers as they raced over the circuit, topping the barriers along the way. Many of these people have followed the meets as they moved Southward from Long Island in September, and the Pennsylvania and Maryland meets in October, and are at Middleburg to see their favorites take the stiff timber and brush jumps.

Members of the hunting colony have given their attention to the entertainment of the guests in the community. Historic homes in and near Middleburg have been opened with lavish hospitality, and teas, luncheons, dinners and dances are being held.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, over whose beautiful estate the races are run, entertained at luncheon before the meet yesterday for the officials and their families and other friends. Among their guests were Mr. William Lipscomb, president of the Loudoun Hunt; Mrs. Fletcher Harper, M. F. H., Orange County Hunt, and Mr. Kenneth Gilpin, of Clarke County, who judged the five races.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Langley have as their guests their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Van Allen, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ryan, of Unionville, Pa. The Langleys also entertained at a luncheon preceding the races.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White have as their house guests Mrs. Frank M. Gould, of Oyster Bay, Long Island; Mr. F. Ambrose Clark, of Cooperstown, N. Y.; Mr. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, of New York and Kentucky, and Mr. Gerry Black, of Baltimore, Md. Mr. and Mrs. White entertained at tea following the races for 100 guests.

Mrs. Thomas B. Davis, of New York and Middleburg, also entertained at tea for a number of guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack T. Skinner have as their guests Mrs. A. C. Macleish, of Los Angeles, California.

Mr. Paul Mellon is here for the races and incidentally to do some fox hunting. He has as his guest the well known artist, Mr. Frank Voss, who is noted for his splendid horse paintings.

Miss Charlotte H. Noland, head mistress of Foxcroft School and joint M. F. H. of the Middleburg Hunt, will entertain at luncheon on Saturday preceding the races. Among her guests will be the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins. The Robert McConnells are entertaining at a dinner party on Saturday night.

Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott, of Montpelier, Va., was present to see her splendid brown gelding, Welbourne Jake, win the feature event, the R. Penn Smith, jr., Challenge Plate, a 3½-mile timber race. This horse was well ridden by Mr. Jack Skinner, of Middleburg.

She was presented the handsome piece of silver which had been held for the past year by Mr. John Schiff, of New York. Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, of Long Island, was also here to see her horses run. They were ridden by Mr. H. W. Frost, jr.

Among others present yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Orme Exnicios, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Guest, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Butler, of New York, the guests of Col. and Mrs. John Butler, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Janney, who are visiting Mrs. Jay Phipps, and Mr. E. R. Combs, State Comptroller, of Richmond, Va.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Unable to Reconcile Her Early Moral Training With Life As It Is, Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It seems to me as if every thread of my life is hopelessly tangled. My problem is that I haven't been able to reconcile my moral training with life as I have found it. All of my 23 years I have had it drilled into me by a very strict family that absolute virginity is the only acceptable standard for a girl of any value. So far my only worries have come from that belief.

* * * *

I am a college graduate of the type who was very active in college organizations, had a fine scholastic record and was considered very attractive. I have been out of college only a few months, so I miss all that. All the men I have ever gone with have been college men.

* * * *

Now the trouble is this: apparently every fellow thinks if he takes you out a few times he can then begin to demand that you indulge in heavy petting or that you yield completely. Now, I am not cold by nature, but I do object to being mauled every time I go out. I don't mind a kiss now and then if I really like a man, but I don't want to go any further.

* * * *

I know this question has been hashed over many times, but I want to have your opinion anyway. Maybe some young persons would be willing to say what they think. The thing that makes the problem especially hard for me is that two years ago my engagement to a man I loved was broken because we couldn't reconcile our differences of opinion on this subject. I was terribly lonely for a while, because I seem to be one of those persons who require love to go on.

* * * *

Not long ago I met a man who said he fell in love with me at first sight. He left his distant home and got a job here; to be near me, he said. Finally I agreed to marry him, although I don't think I can ever do more than like him a great deal. The power to love completely seems to have gone since my first disillusionment. However, in the last few weeks he has decided there is no reason why we should wait to enjoy the physical privileges of marriage until the time when we can be legally united.

* * * *

He feels he must pay back the $600 he owes before he can afford marriage. Nobody cares about virginity any more, he claims. To hear him talk, you would think I am the only virgin left in this country, and a fool for clinging to my standards.

* * * *

What do you think of such a man? Since this is the second time I have met the situation I am beginning to think there isn't a single decent man in Washington. Do you know any place where I could find one? My fiance and I have agreed on a truce until Thanksgiving time, but between then and now there are some questions I want to settle. Is it true that ideals are only surface talk and that nobody lives up to them? Isn't it possible to love a man and marry him without indulging in sex intimacy before the ceremony? Is it true that virginity no longer matters to young men who are really in love? Isn't it possible to be a good sport and a worth-while person without indulging in drinking bouts and heavy petting?

If I give up my fiance I shall be utterly alone so far as masculine companionship is concerned, because my work is with children and rather confining, except on week-ends. The fact that I am tall further limits my social activities, for I refuse to go with men shorter than I. Whenever I have only myself to depend on I am highly successful, but this love problem I simply cannot work out. I am not designed by temperament or desire to be an old maid, so what shall I do? Sincerely,

REBEKAH.

DEAR REBEKAH: As I pointed out in this column of October 9, "Dr. Alfred Adler, psychiatrist and internationally recognized authority on human relationship, holds that the man who selfishly insists upon pre-martial relations makes a poor husband. Why? Because it is obvious that he has no consideration for his feminine partner who, under present conditions, faces greater risks and penalties than the male in such a relationship." Dr. Adler, as I said then, goes even further and insists that most men, no matter how they may theorize on the subject, do not approve of pre-marital affairs for the woman they marry, even if they themselves are the sole recipients of her favor.

* * * *

Judged by the measuring stick of a man and a scientist, therefore, your present fiance, like his predecessor, lacks those sturdy and lofty qualities of character which make for a good husband. In scoffing at virtue and idealism as outmoded attributes of desirable womanhood, each, it would appear, is being as dishonest with himself as with you. They are a grown-up variety of the foot-stomping, toy-smashing youngster who wants what he wants when he wants it, regardless of the cost price to others which his hare-brained self-indulgence may entail.

* * * *

If your fiance can't or won't meet your terms, there is no reason on earth why you should permit him to sharp-bargain you into accepting his. Give him up. Let him go. You admit you don't love him anyway. And that is reason enough, all others aside, for rejecting with finality his proposal of unhallowed privileges.

Your love problems will no doubt work out as satisfactorily as those other problems you have successfully dealt with, when, as and if you summon the courage to stand high-heartedly by your innermost convictions concerning their wise solutions.

* * * *

Isn't it straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel to rule short-statured men arbitrarily out of your social scheme of things, and yet not be able to make up your mind whether to stoop to inferior association? Through placing false emphasis on superficial values, you may be greatly responsible for your twice broken heart. If you must rule out certain types of men, let the ukase be directed at the Don Juans and Casanovas; at the weak and unruly; the unchaste and undisciplined; the grabbing and domineering. Learn to look beyond the surface for the spiritual and enduring values. M. H

Furs Take to Capes for Evening

A baum marten cape adds glamour to evening gown of wine-colored broadcloth. The petit point bag with gold frame and massive gold bracelet are appropriate accents. This chic cape is versatile enough to wear for daytime with afternoon frocks and the last word in formal evening wraps.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

YOUR fur coat may be as straight as a string or fashioned along princess lines for daytime, but for evening the latest idea is bulk. Fur capes of long-haired pelts, and alluring wraps to complement sleek evening gowns will be much in evidence.

Silver, red and white fox, sable, kolinsky and baum marten are among the most popular fur capes which adorn evening shoulders. These are made in a number of interesting lengths—waistline, hipline or, in the case of ermine, floor-length. But always, there is delightful fullness.

For daytime, Persian lamb capes are a distinctive late fall fashion. These are made in finger-tip length. Some of the evening capes are versatile enough to be worn for daytime; for instance, the sable, marten or kolinsky. The short, boxy swagger coat is another new idea in bulk which is gaining impetus in the daytime mode, and is often carried on into evening styles.

It is typically a fur season. Not only are fur coats and capes extremely popular, but fur-trimmed coats, suits and frocks are lavishly trimmed with fur; hats are made entirely of fur or combined with velour, felt or broadcloth, and fur muffs are of varying sizes. Fur gloves are unique in the winter style picture. These are made of the same fur which fashions the coat or trims the coat or suit, Persian lamb being a favorite in this realm.

Following the current trend in styling, fur coats have adopted princess lines. Like dresses, they have fitted bodices, defined waistlines and flared skirts. Next in popularity is the tunic silhouette, taking prestige over the swagger in popularity in the latest collections; although the swing swagger is still in the style picture, being preferred by many to the fitted coats.

Persian lamb is the tops in winter furs for general wear, with gray giving black much competition in the color race. Mink has attained unprecedented popularity, due undoubtedly to the ability of modern designers to manipulate it in accordance with the latest styles this year. Sealskin is omnipresent in the fur fashion scene—both brown Alaska seal and the ever-popular Hudson seal.

White ermine has staged a return to vogue, due to the present trend for luxury and elegance in the mode—a coronation influence. The short or long ermine cape and floor-length cape or coat, luxuriously wrapping the figure, are all sponsored by stylists. Ermine sleeves in black velvet dinner gowns and ermine tails adorning evening gowns and coiffures are new accents, particularly adapted to the younger woman.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 11.

THAT SEGMENT of New York which lunches religiously at the snooty Colony Restaurant and tablemates the icy either gives its rye or the joyous little wave is still talking about the marriage—meaning, of course, the joyous mating of Janet Newbold Ryan and William Rhinelander Stewart, always considered the beau ideal of those gents who go about town to all the right places.

ALICE HUGHES.

Since Wondrous Willie has been divorced about 11 years from Laura Biddle, whose middle name is legion, or herd, the legend of bachelorhood had grown up about him, and our society scribblers always referred to him as Gotham's "most eligible bachelor"—which was surely giving Willie all the best of it, since he was married several years to La Belle Biddle, and not happily. The lovely Nancy, of course, married Allen A. Ryan, jr., in '29, and was divorced a few months ago. Since that time, and even before, Willie and Janet were the social version of Damon and Pythias, or Ham and Eggs. In fact, so constant was their association that when William entered the perishin' old Colony with the brunette Paulette Goddard on his arm, four stately pillars of the place dropped their eyeglasses into their petit pois.

But it is all over now—the bonds have been pledged, or whatever they do with bonds at weddings, and the happy young lovebirds have winged their way southward to Palm Beach for what is always laughingly called "the honeymoon." Everyone, it is to be supposed, is bathed in bliss. Wondrous Willie has one of the world's loveliest blondes. Janet has what is popularly called "a catch." The only losers are the sad newspaper cameramen, who are now forced to fall back on the wild Donahue boys, Woody and Wooly, or the wandering George Vanderbilts. How some men suffer!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had all the clerks in a justly famous Fifth avenue store cutting out paper dolls and counting their fingers the other day. She went to the second floor—"Gents' Goods"—and laid it on the line for 50 neckties and 48 collar buttons, and try to make something of that. The gents' furnishings couldn't—unless she was beating the gun by a mile on her Christmas shopping . . .

Speaking of the President of the United States, I suppose you may have heard him make a brief talk one Friday evening on the subject of the Community Chest. I wonder if you were overcome, as I was, with the marvelous care he had taken of his winning, persuasive voice. There he was, three days after finishing one of the most exciting and arduous campaigns in history, when the average vocal chords would have been entirely in shreds—and his voice came through the loud-speaker as clear and resonant as though he had done nothing for months, but ask for a second helping of spuds. I consider the care of his voice nothing less than amazing, and think he might make a million dollars by telling the world how he did it.

If the Dionne Quintuplets, those wealthy young Canadians, begin demanding the smartest trickery from Fifth Avenue in a few years, and no fooling around little stores, it may be because their mother, and their nurses, hit the big town now and then to get spruced and primped. Only the other day I ran into Nurse Yvonne Leroux in a mighty salon de beaute—or beauty parlor to me— getting one of the swellest cuts and waves in the place. I'll bet she knocked the other nurses stiff with envy when she hit good old Callender again! . . . And only so many shopping days to Xmas!

Dashing down to Washington recently not to see the Cherry Tree I ran (mildly) into Corinne Griffith in the lobby of the National Theater. She looked lovely in a ton of silver fox. Now Mrs. George Preston Marshall, she tells me she is going to live in the Capital awhile—which should be fine for her, it being the grandest spot in the Nation to roost, in my belief.

Business Girl Should Strive For Freshness

Attire Needs to Be Chosen to Wear Well Over Period of Hours.

By Carolyn Abbott.

TODAY the business girl who wants to look neat and attractive every day must select clothes that keep fresh for seven or eight hours, and use make-up that will stay on at least three hours.

Crisp linens that soon crush are all right for the person who wears them on a short shopping tour or to a luncheon, but not for a woman who sits at a desk all day. And any lipstick is satisfactory if you can apply it every hour, but if you have to wait until lunch hour to freshen up your face, an indelible one is necessary.

If you are a business woman, be especially careful not to use too much make-up and have a tendency to look artificial, for this sort of a face requires even more attention than a natural amount of cosmetics, as it has to be repaired more often to retain its perfect appearance.

Pure Water and Soap.

In cleansing your face, pure water and good soap are as good for the job as any cream if they are used properly. An especially effective treatment is to clean the skin with a soft, fluffy cream which takes off the dirt, grime and make-up. Next apply a second coat of the cream and leave it on for 15 minutes. This may be left on while taking your bath, as the steam from the hot tub helps open the pores and allows the cream to penetrate deeply and do a complete job of removing foreign matter. Wipe off all of the cream and rinse the face about six times with warm water, finishing with several rinses of very cold water. Splash the cold water on the face, patting well to stir up a good circulation until the skin glows. A final freshening with a pet astringent finishes the job.

A business girl may not feel that she has time to go through a long procedure of cleansing her skin before retiring, but by all means she must at least wash her face well and give herself full treatment one night a week.

A woman cannot keep in her desk all of the cleansing preparations that she may like to use at home, but she should have handy a hand lotion, a simple skin cleaner, powder and plenty of fresh cleaning tissue and cotton. A thorough cleansing would take too much time away from her work and would make her unpopular with women associates who want to use the rest-room mirror.

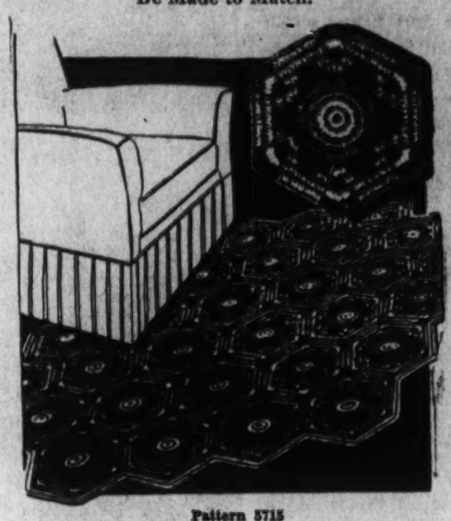
Foundation Creams.

There are foundation creams that hold powder on the face and throat for half a day and powders, especially liquid ones, with unusual adherent tendencies. These may be had at prices that fit any woman's pocketbook if she shops carefully. There is also mascara that won't rub off or smear in case you decide to shed a tear.

If you are using liquid powder be sure first of all to clean your face thoroughly. When you have done this and patted it with skin tonic, pour a very small amount of the liquid powder in one hand and smooth it on the face and throat. Using the fingertips, rub lightly and see that one spot is dry before you proceed to the next. When the entire powder surface is dry, dust off the excess powder with a dab of clean cotton.

HOUSEHOLD ARTS

Durable Crocheted Rug of Rag or Yarn Will Last Many Years; Afghan and Pillow May Be Made to Match.



Pattern 5715

By Alice Brooks.

"DURABLE" is its middle name—this crocheted rug that boasts of so much charm and practicality. Before it's put together it's nothing but a series of six-sided medallions, all wonderfully easy to crochet. Rags make a beautiful rug and an inexpensive one. Or use rug yarn or candlewicking. And, if you please, an afghan and pillow may be crocheted to match, using Germantown wool. They would be lovely in scraps. In pattern 5715 you will find instructions for making the rug shown; an illustration of it and of all stitches used; material requirements; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Fibroid Tumors.

Fibroids in the uterus present a problem of importance to women chiefly in middle life. Between the ages of 20 and 30 they are encountered but seldom. Approximately 30 per cent of all women, however, after the age of 35, will possess this type of tumor to some extent. Fortunately, many of them call for no treatment whatsoever.

What causes these overgrowths? No one knows exactly. Some form of irritation has been held to be responsible and there is a widespread notion that a rich blood supply is more likely to breed them than an impoverished one, although contradictory data have been cited. Certain authors believe that they result from the failure of some internal secretion.

Now and then they will undergo degeneration. Lime salts may be deposited within them and spaces may appear and become filled with a soft gelatinous material. If the blood supply is shut off, necrosis or death of the tissues will occur and cysts may form as a complication.

The most common symptom may be linked with hemorrhage. There is an old dictum that every fibroid expects to bleed sooner or later, no matter what its size or where it is located. But this is not always true and perhaps all too often removal of certain tumors, which are perfectly harmless unless they degenerate, is carried out because of fear of hemorrhage. But some of them may bleed and if hemorrhage takes place because of their presence secondary anemia may come on rapidly.

At the outset they have no effect upon the health of the patient and may remain benign throughout life. Women will complain often of a sense of weight with fatigue and this is generally due to an increase in bulk. Again, they may reach the size of a grapefruit or even larger without affecting the patient's strength at all. There are many women with fairly large fibroids in whom the condition is symptomless.

Pseudo Ruler's 'Dream Bridge' To Be Opened

Gigantic San Francisco-to-Oakland Span Will Be Dedicated Today.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—A royal edict issued 67 years ago by "Emperor" Joshua Norton, the tiny Napoleonic figure, who proclaimed himself rex imperator of the United States and protector of Mexico, will be obeyed almost to the letter tomorrow when the $77,000,000 San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge is opened formally to automobile traffic.

The strutting little man, who levied on his subjects—the residents of San Francisco and Oakland—for his living and his grandiose uniforms, once issued an order that "a suspension bridge be constructed from the improvements lately ordered by our royal decree at Oakland Point to Yerba Buena, from thence to the mountain range of Saucilleto."

Norton did not live to see his order obeyed, but the engineers who in three and one-half years threw across San Francisco Bay the world's largest span, followed his instructions as far as bridging between Iakland and Yerba Buena, an island in the bay, were concerned.

From Yerba Buena, the bridge swings across the bay to San Francisco in a magnificent series of suspension arches. Bridge builders are pushing their way from San Francisco to Sausalito (Saucilleto of Norton's decree) with the Golden Gate Bridge. The latter will not be ready for a year or two.

Eight and one-quarter miles long from the end of its western approach to the tip of its entrance, the massive San Francisco-Oakland Bay span will provide the first means of direct communication between the populous and industrially important East Bay area, with its cities of Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley and its connections to the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, and the city and peninsula of San Francisco, center of world shipping, of Western financing and of wholesale trade for the Pacific Coast.

From this junction of the two great areas, experts believe a metropolitan area to rival New York will arise, just as New York grew from the date of the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The bridge will provide only automobile transportation for the present. High-speed electric lines will not be in operation until next year.

Traffic will start to flow across the bridge soon after Gov. Frank F. Merriam cuts the chains stretched across each terminal.

Paper Says King May Quit Throne

London, Nov. 11 (U.P.).—The Week, one of the most outspoken of British publications, shocked the public today by speculating on the possibility of King Edward's abdiction so that he might marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

It was by far the most frank discussion of the monarch's friendship with the former Baltimore debutante which has appeared in any British publication thus far.

The present high rate of insurance on the coronation, The Week said, is due to the possibility of the King's abdication.

"The idea behind the rate," the journal stated, "is that the King insists on marrying Mrs. Simpson and the opposition of the bishops and the conservative party generally will force him from the throne."

The article deals at length with what it calls the "palace battle" between the old and young guards.

King to Pay Call Today On Britain's Great Ships

Portland, England, Nov. 11 (AP).—Proud of his navy, in the tradition of English monarchs, King Edward VIII will make an informal "personal call" on Britain's watchdogs of the sea tomorrow.

The pomp of a naval review, it was emphasized, will be absent. For two days, the 42-year-old bachelor sovereign will speed to and fro amid the great gray ships of the nation's defensive battle line, talking to their officers, watching demonstrations of the latest fighting equipment and studying plans for the protection of his island kingdom's shores.

Catholics to Hold Press Parley Here

The annual winter meeting of the executive board of the Catholic Press Association will get under way at the Catholic University of America tomorrow morning.

Questions to be discussed will include selection of the 1937 convention city. Six towns in the United States, including Washington, and two in the Dominion of Canada, are bidding for the convention. Headquarters of the executive board will be the Washington Hotel.

Vincent de Paul Fitzpatrick, managing editor of the Catholic Review, official organ of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, is president of the association.

Other officers are: The Rev. Jerome W. De Pencier, O. S. M., editor of The Mother of Sorrows Magazine, vice president; Joseph H. Meier, publisher of the Catholic Press Directory, Chicago, secretary; Charles H. Ridder, publisher of the Catholic News, New York City; the Rev. F. P. Le Buffe, S. J., of the staff of America, New York City; Joseph J. Quinn, editor of the Oklahoma Southwest Courier; Dr. Thomas P. Hart, editor of the Cincinnati Telegraph, and Benedict Elder, editor of the Louisville Record.

Relief Recipient, Back on His Feet, Reimburses U. S.

The Diogenes motif scored another triumph along the pathway of national recovery yesterday when the Treasury Department received $15 from a former relief recipient, who now is back on his feet financially.

The man, whose name was not revealed, sent the following letter along with the check:

"During February and March, 1934, I received Federal relief in the form of groceries and meat to the approximate value of $15 through the Los Angeles County Welfare Department. Since I now am in somewhat better circumstances, I think I should refund said amount."

Readers Boost Edith Maxwell Defense Funds

$414 Now on Hand, With $1,000 Needed to Finance Her Second Trial.

With more than $1,000 necessary to carry on Edith Maxwell's fight for freedom, readers of The Washington Post yesterday continued to build the defense fund for the 22-year-old school teacher's second trial on charges of murdering her father with a woman's slipper.

Contributions received yesterday were:

Mrs. R. E. Clements	$5.00
Anonymous	1.00
Mrs. J. W. Jacobs	5.00
Mrs. Otelia W. Thorn	1.00
P. L. Heliman	2.00
Total	$14.00
Previous reported	400.28
Total	$414.28

Decision on a change of venue motion for the new trial is pending with Judge Ezra T. Carter, appointed by Gov. George Peery of Virginia to preside at the second Maxwell trial, expected to rule on the motion early next week.

Meanwhile, Edith remains at a friend's farm near Richmond, where she is preparing herself for a new courtroom ordeal. She is confident of ultimate vindication and has repeatedly voiced her appreciation for what readers of The Post are doing.

Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney, who was retained by The Post to conduct Edith's fight for freedom, is busy preparing for the new trial, granted after the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals held evidence at the first trial insufficient to warrant the conviction.

Edith was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary by Circuit Judge H. A. W. Skeen. Testimony at the first trial showed she struck her father, Trigg Maxwell, Wise, Va., mountaineer, with her slipper while beating her during a drunken rage.

Judge Skeen, however, removed himself from further hearings after defense counsel reminded him he was distantly related to Twigg Maxwell.

New Group Advocates 'Stamped' $100 Pension

San Francisco, Nov. 11 (AP).—A new old-age pension organization, the Hornets, which advocates $100 a month in stamped money for all persons 50 years of age or over, has presented articles of incorporation to the Secretary of State.

Joel Hervieu of Piedmont, Calif., a director, said the society has more than 300 members.

"The pension would be paid through the Postal Department in stamped money," Hervieu said. "The money would be issued in $1 bills only and would have a 2-cent revenue stamp affixed before every transaction. As soon as a $1 bill contained 52 two-cent stamps it would be redeemable by the Postal Department. The 4-cent profit would go to defray the cost of printing and administration."

TODAY, THEY KNOW BETTER
AT THE ages of 45 to 50 all women undergo a physiological change. The symptoms of this change are Hot Flushes, Dizzy Spells, Headaches, "Nerves," Sweating, Chills, Depression and they last for months, even years. Not so many years ago women who consulted their doctors about these miserable symptoms were told to go home and not worry about them, for nothing could be done. Today, however, doctors know better. They know that these annoying symptoms are caused by the lack of or an insufficient supply of an important gland-regulating hormone in the system. And they know that when they replace this regulating hormone in the system the symptoms generally disappear.
Today you can get this identical hormone, together with other helpful ingredients, in Zo-ak Tablets (Orange Box) at any Unity Drug Store or any good chain drug store. And you can take them with confidence, for Zo-ak is the formula of a well-known New York physician. It contains no harmful drugs, no dope, no depressing sedatives. Try Zo-ak as directed on label. If it does not relieve you of the Hot Flushes, Dizzy Spells, "Nerves," Headaches, if it does not make you feel happier in mind and body you get your money back. Education Week

This being American Education Week, we thought we'd drop in on the Office of Education and learn what effect the New Deal has had on its activities.

The Office of Education is not a teaching outfit, but concentrates on research studies and educational "promotion." The public affairs forums and the weekly radio broadcasts are the outstanding types of new "promotion" work undertaken under the New Deal. Both the forums and radio work are being financed with relief funds, as are the office's three major research studies—on universities, vocational education for Negros and the reorganization of local school units.

Besides these "relief" projects, Congress has authorized a new library service in the office that has to be set up, and has entrusted the office with the administration of the phase of the social security act for the rehabilitation of the blind. The George-Deen act for the expansion of vocational education, the last piece of New Deal educational legislation, does not go into effect until 1937.

Of these activities, unquestionably the public affairs forums are Commissioner John W. Studebaker's pride and joy. As a school superintendent in Des Moines, Iowa, Dr. Studebaker launched the idea of public forums, and when he was appointed education commissioner he brought his brainchild with him.

Ten demonstration forums have already been set up and eight others are to be authorized soon. The average attendance at meetings is around 70. There are resident forum leaders, chosen by the local school boards, who lead the discussions. Most popular subjects are international affairs, economic recovery, fascism and war, New Deal legislation and liberty and democracy, in that order.

Discussions are supplemented by exhibits of appropriate pamphlets, which anyone interested in further reading on the subject can buy. Drawn up by the Office of Education, bibliographies include expressions of all opinions from that of the Liberty League against the New Deal to Norman Thomas's attacks on the Supreme Court.

The public forums have proven very popular, and Office of Education officials estimate that 800 to 1,000 such forums have sprung up throughout the country. The office's radio programs also have proven tremendously popular. The most popular of the five weekly radio programs, "The World Is Yours," done in co-operation with the Smithsonian Institution, draws 2,000 fan letters a week.

Some WPA project control employes who suffered salary cuts under the recent reclassification are likely to get raises soon. On the protest of the WPA union, officials have agreed to pay employes demoted to lower grades the top salary of their new classification, provided their efficiency records rate such increases.

Moving Exit

An Associated Press reporter is responsible for this story, but it's worth repeating here. It concerns an elderly guard at the old Smithsonian Institution Building who apparently has never quite gotten over the fact that so many of the old exhibits have been moved to the National Museum.

The other day this guard was approached by a visitor who had lost his way while meandering through the rooms of the old red-brick building.

"Where's the exit?" asked the visitor.

Replied the guard, "Moved to the other building."

Dr. Ross Gunn, technical adviser to the Naval Research Laboratory, has just completed a study that shows the American continent is moving southwestward into the Pacific Ocean. But don't be alarmed, the rate of movement is about an inch a year.

Tonight at 8 (and maybe 8:30) the Agriculture Music Guild will go to town in gay nineties style at the Agriculture auditorium . . . The Resettlement Lodge of the A. F. G. E. will elect officers for the new year . . . The Michigan State Society will discuss plans for the year at the Hotel Lafayette.

The Social Security Board union has a new constitution at last . . . On December 5 the union will stage a dance at the Wardman Park—an added attraction for the stags or (or girls, we aren't sure which) will be "Ladies' Choice" numbers to mark the passing of the leap year . . . Esther M. Auerbach and Arthur Bernstein are the new chairmen of the union's legislative and civil affairs committees and Edward C. Crouch the new treasurer of the board's credit union.

City's Board Meets Today On Abattoir

Nolen Opens New Fight to Stay Building of Slaughterhouse.

With its special committee sharply divided on the question of whether Adolf Gobel, Inc., should be granted a building permit to enlarge a slaughter house in the Northeast, the District Commissioners today will hear members of the committee in an effort to reach a decision on the much controverted subject.

Although two members of the committee signed a report "with reservations" advising the Commissioners that they have no alternative but to grant the permit, one of the committeemen, John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, yesterday issued a minority opinion urging the District heads to reject the Gobel application.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission, is one of the leaders of the civic opposition to the abattoir as head of the committee of 100 of the Federal City.

Nuisance Feared.

Nolen said that testimony presented the committee indicated the killing and disposal of 5,000 hogs, cattle, and sheep a week "would create a public nuisance from one or more sources."

He asserted that other cities have either prohibited the enlargement or new construction of abattoirs or have adopted rigid restrictions as to their locations and operations. The District, he added, because it is the seat of the Federal government, has standards even higher than other communities.

"Moreover, at the particular location for the plant in question," he said, "there are so many public interests involved as to warrant the presumption that a nuisance definition of a relatively high character could be sustained."

Hospital Nearby.

Fort Mahan Park, Fort Drive, Anacostia Park, the proposed East Capitol street stadium, Gallinger Hospital, and two housing projects are in proximity of the abattoir.

Pointing out that the granting of the permit might lead the Gobel company to make a substantial investment only to lose it subsequently, should the plant's operation prove a nuisance, Nolen added:

"Is it not, therefore, a more proper and consistent policy in the public interest for the commissioners to refuse to grant this permit and if the company then so desires, let the court decide whether, upon competent testimony, the action of the commissioners can be sustained?"

Nurse Fund Rises As Post's Readers Aid Burned Girl

Kind-hearted readers of The Washington Post yesterday contributed an additional $55 to the fund to provide special nursing care for Miss Dorothy Fenwick, 21, who was seriously burned last month when a jar of gasoline hurled by her mother at her stepfather crashed against the stove on which she was cooking breakfast.

Contributions started after The Post last week revealed that the young girl, unable to cry out or move her hands to summon aid, was about to be deprived of the special nursing care necessary to save her life. Since then $99 has been sent to The Post. Mrs. W. E. Dettweiler, 3545 Quesada street northwest, who is acting as coordinator of volunteer efforts on Miss Fenwick's behalf, has suggested that groups interested in the case could give card parties to raise contributions for the nursing fund.

These contributions were received yesterday:

Large Cast and Audience Feature Police Show

Post Staff Photos.

Suspects numbering 83 were viewed at headquarters last night by 135 Washingtonians who have been the victims of holdup men and burglars. Top, general view of the line-up. Lower, Keith Merrill, Undersecretary of State, dons his hat on leaving the line-up theater. He failed to identify any of the suspects.

Victim Can't Identify Robber, But Suspect Identifies Victim

83 Police Characters Paraded in 'Chorus Girl' Fashion Before 135 'Guests;' 10 Are Pointed Out as Holdup Perpetrators.

Recent victims of hold-ups and house-breakings, 135 of them, were guests at an informal reception held by Lieut. John Fowler at Police Headquarters last night.

Entertainment was provided by 83 Washington police characters, who put on a pretty good act.

Lined up in rows of eight, like chorus girls, they paraded back and forth on a raised platform while a battery of powerful lights beat down on them. Responding to signals, they took off their hats, replaced them and gave the audience an opportunity to observe their finely chiseled profiles—both right and left views.

To add spice to the fun, the guests engaged in a little guessing game. They scrutinized closely each member of the chorus carefully. They were looking for someone they might have seen before.

Ten of the guests found "old friends" in the line-up, "friends" they had last seen behind automomatics or had seen rapidly leaving their homes through windows.

One of those present, Dr. Robert T. West, of 2519 Fourteenth street northwest, couldn't identify the man who held him up. He didn't remember having seen any of the men before.

So Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett, who was acting as assistant master of ceremonies, asked a group in the line-up whether any of them had ever seen Dr. West before.

Two of them said "yes," adding they had held him up.

The doctor still didn't remember. And matters seemed to be coming to a pretty pass, what with guests and entertainers mingling and swapping sides in the game.

But everything turned out all right. The man in the line-up, 23-year-old Jay Lankford, continued to press the acquaintance he had struck up so informally.

"Sure, I know him," he persisted. "I stuck my hand in my pocket like this—see—and made out like I had a gun." He demonstrated.

The doctor then identified Lankford.

Police said Lankford and his brother, John, 21, had admitted taking part in four holdups.

Among those present was Keith Merrill, executive assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State. He wore a top-hat, tail coat and a white tie, and failed to find in the line-up the man who entered his home at 2535 Belmont road northwest, a few weeks ago.

The 83 persons in the line-up were rounded up by police last week-end in an attempt to end a long series of housebreaks, holdups and pocketbook snatchings. The ten identified last night were held.

While the detectives and the victims were at police headquarters, William T. McCormick, 58, of 1125 New Jersey avenue northwest, was beaten and robbed by two colored men, who escaped.

McCormick was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he remained in an undetermined condition, suffering injuries of the eyes, nose and head.

At the same time, another colored man snatched a pocketbook containing an undetermined amount of money and valuables from Helen O. Atkins, of 817 C street southeast. Miss Atkins was walking on Bryant street near Fourth street northwest.

Pius' Poor Health Creates Anxiety

Vatican City, Nov. 11 (U.P.).—Intimates of Pope Pius today admitted anxiety over the Pontiff's health, saying that for several days he had scarcely been able to walk.

Members of the Pontiff's household described his condition reluctantly only after long questioning.

They strenuously denied reports his holiness had suffered partial paralysis in one leg, but said that in his very brief walks he dragged his left leg and that his ankles and calves were swollen.

Household attendants are making every effort to save the Pope's energy. They say he has a horror of being ill and resolutely insists on continuing his daily audiences. To save his strength, the audience room has been shifted nearer his apartment and whenever possible attendants carry him to the small papal throne.

New System To Modernize Tax Offices

Mechanical Ledger Plan to Speed Up Work, Cut Duplications.

Sub-committee Approves Plan; Adoption Is Expected Soon.

A plan for complete modernization of the District tax assessor's office was adopted yesterday by a sub-committee of the special District tax committee during a 4½-hour meeting in the office of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

A new accounting and billing system, operated chiefly by mechanical recording and adding devices, is encompassed in the proposal, according to Rufus S. Lusk, chairman of the sub-committee.

The core of the new system is a central billing office, which will have a card ledger with a card for every piece of property in the District showing every delinquent tax or special assessment against the property. The billing of Washington taxpayers will thus be reduced from 12 to 4 steps and the record from 9 accounts to the single ledger.

The tax arrears and the special assessment offices will disappear under the new system, and taxpayers no longer will have to rush from one office to another when taxes fall due to ascertain whether any special assessments or penalties have been levied on their real property.

Accounts will be kept up to the minute and constantly in balance under the new procedure, Lusk said.

Bills will be mailed taxpayers showing all accounts due the District and probably will be in original or stub form, he added, in a fashion similar to a householder's gas or electric bill.

"This readily available file will enable the tax collector to follow up delinquent taxes," Lusk said.

While the sub-committee's report must be adopted first by the full committee and next by the Commissioners before its recommendations become effective, no opposition is anticipated.

The new system probably will not get under way in any event before the early part of next year as money will have to be appropriated for the purchase of mechanical equipment. Selection of the devices was left to the assessor by the sub-committee. While the cost will depend upon the type of equipment chosen, it is estimated that it will not run over $40,000.

4 Die as CCC Truck Falls Into Stream

Washington, Pa., Nov. 11 (AP).—Corpl. E. C. Moore of the State highway patrol said tonight he received reports four persons were killed and a dozen injured in the wreck of a Civilian Conservation Corps truck near McDonald, Pa.

Moore said he understood the truck crashed over an embankment and fell into a stream, killing three youths and an Army officer.

A hospital at nearby Cannonsburg said it was receiving patients rapidly and expected about a dozen. Nurses said the youths appeared to be suffering shock and could give no coherent account of the accident.

Joseph T. Penderville, of Bulger, near McDonald, said he was at the scene and that one of the dead was a Capt. Barrett.

He said he believed there were 21 youths and the Army officer on the truck.

Cuts Forecast In Power Rate For D.C. in '37

Slash Expected to Equal $310,000 Reduction of Last January.

Another reduction in electric rates for Washington consumers appeared likely yesterday, although the Public Utilities Commission will take no steps to bring it about until early next year under the terms of a sliding scale arrangement.

While it is too early to make any accurate estimate, reports for the first nine months of the calendar year indicate that the amount available for rate cuts may equal or surpass the $310,000 applied last January.

The sliding scale adopted by the Potomac Electric Power Company and the Public Utilities Commission has become nationally known because of the regularity with which it has produced both consumer rate reductions and continued profits to stockholders.

The first arrangement of the sort to be adopted in Washington, it led to the adoption of a similar scale for rate and profit adjustments between the commission and the Washington Gas Light Co. about a year ago.

Under the power company's sliding scale all profits above 6.5 per cent are divided between shareholders and consumers, with the latter getting the greater share as the amount increases.

Washington's electric rates are already among the lowest in the country, and the opinion was expressed rather freely last Jauuary that the "rock bottom" had been reached and that little or no further reductions could be anticipated.

Board Proposes School Debate On Vote in D. C.

A proposal of the five white public high schools of Washington conduct a declamation contest on the subject of national representation for the District was suggested yesterday.

The proposal was sent the executive committee of the citizens joint committee on national representation for the District of Columbia by Leo Maguire, president of the District Junior Board of Commerce.

"This would stir up widespread interest in our campaign for national representation," Maguire said during the meeting at the Board of Trade. He said members of the Junior Board would urge the organization to put up a prize for the winning student.

"We propose," he added, "that as judges for these contests, we invite members of Congress who are only slightly familiar with our fight."

The national convention of the Junior Board of Commerce is already on record as backing representation for the District, Maguire reminded the executive committee.

Other organizations whose representatives reported Nation-wide support were the Voteless League of Women's Voters, Federation of Women's Clubs and Young Democratic Clubs of America. Both Malcolm McConihe, Democratic national committeeman for the District, and Edward Colladay, Republican committeeman, recorded their support of the proposal.

2 Hyattsville Convictions Are Appealed

Counsel for D.C. Drivers Holds Police Violated Law in Arrests.

A charge that the "crux of the whole racket in Prince Georges County is the failure of police to take arrested motorists to the nearest justice of the peace" was made yesterday by Louis Lebowitz as he represented two Washingtonians in Hyattsville Police Court.

The men were convicted and Lebowitz noted an appeal.

Citing Section 204 of the motor vehicle laws of Maryland, Lebowitz declared it is illegal for policemen to take prisoners to justices of the peace of their own choice. The law, he asserted, requires them to take the motorists to the magistrate nearest to the scene of the violation.

Addressing himself to Judge George B. Merrick, Lebowitz, who is credited with starting the police investigation, said:

"It is time that the officers are told that if they don't obey the law they can't expect the defendants to obey the law."

Lebowitz was defending two Washington colored motorists on charges of exceeding 60 miles an hour and reckless driving.

The defendants, Grafton Lewis and Frederick Jenkins were arrested November 2 by County Officers Arthur Brown and Warren E. Peake.

Peake, who has since been suspended by the board of commissioners pending the grand jury's investigation into reports of an alleged police bonding scandal, testified yesterday.

He told the court that he and Brown trailed the two men for "quite a distance" before arresting them at Berwyn, Md.

Jenkins and Lewis denied that they were going faster than 50 miles an hour.

Lebowitz called the court's attention to the fact that in bringing the two men before Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, in Hyattsville, the officers had passed through the jurisdictions of two other magistrates, George S. Phillips, of Berwyn, and Frederick Lutz, of Riverdale.

A motion of Lebowitz to dismiss the charges against his defendants on the grounds that the officers disobeyed the motor vehicle regulations in not taking the prisoners to one of these justices of the peace was overruled by Judge Merrick, who found the two men guilty on both charges and fined them $105.

Tarzana and Reptina Are Not Only Callers Who Come to a Drama Desk as Envoys of Treats in Store

Ray Henderson, Richard Maney, Edward Holland and others of the Cymbal-Whanging Craft, Drop in to Herald Imminent Attractions in the Showshops; and Some Still Are Casting "Gone With the Wind."

MR. RAY HENDERSON, frequently celebrated in this space as one of the most helpful of the cymbal-whangers devoting their austere talents to the glorification of the so-called "legitimate" theater, has been one of this week's most welcome callers.

BELL.

Mr. Henderson always offers a refreshing note to jaded drama desks by the unquenchable enthusiasm which he betrays for the enterprises of Miss Katharine Cornell and her producer husband, Guthrie McClintic.

On this visit he inspires a vast curiosity as to the exact content of Maxwell Anderson's newest play, "The Wingless Victory," in which Miss Cornell will make her first appearance on any stage in the National Theater on Tuesday, November 24, with Walter Abel as her leading man and a distinguished cast in support, by revealing "stills" of Miss Cornell in a mood and a mode that she never before has assumed in the theater.

One gathers, not too vaguely, that the star of "The Wingless Victory" at last satisfies a long-standing desire to depict an Oriental character upon the boards. In the new Anderson work she is cast as a Malay princess who is brought back to a chill and forbidding New England atmosphere of frigid antagonism by a seafaring young man who sails out of one of the traditional ports of the country's Eastern fringe and comes back slightly encumbered.

These unusually effective character studies of Miss Cornell will find their way to public scrutiny on these pages in due course.

In the meantime, it seems sufficient to indicate that a Katharine Cornell premiere always is an occasion of a box-office sellout. If you have any ambition whatever to impress your neighbors by having fine seats for this engagement, you had best be mailing in your reservations—with check attached—now.

That last is my own idea—not Mr. Henderson's, although I suspect that he shares in it.

Other callers, on the same day with Tarzana, my current crush, and Reptina, my equally current abomination, were Dick Maney, who stopped by to add a word of commendation to the critical appraisal that had accrued following his star's—Noel Coward's—first-night triumph at the National. Mr. Maney merely wished us to know that Mr. Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Joyce Carey and the rest would be here for a second week, which already was something that we had vaguely suspected.

Then there was Edward Holland, an old friend from the celluloid days of our ebullitions, who dropped by to say some complimentary things about the RKO-Radio picturization of "Winterset," which has Burgess Meredith and Margo in its principal roles, just as it had when it played the National last season.

"Winterset" should justify all of the faith placed in it by the New York Critics' Circle, which nominated it best of its year in New York, by making a picture of the first rank. Quite an "open house" for one day, and a happy one, I should say.

The gentlemen of the press are about to get themselves a "break". Since "Adventure in Manhattan," the screen play opening at the Warner Brother's Earle tomorrow, concerns itself with a reporter who was able to forecast dire calamities before they happened, Zone Manager John J. Payette, Frank La Falce, his favorite "mouthpiece," and others of the Warners' local executives, have determined to entertain the local court reporters as their guests at tomorrow night's performance.

The show also will include opportunity to revel in the dizzy dissonances of Ted Lewis and His Band in what they are pleased to term a "Rhythm Rhapsody Revue"—whatever that is.

The beneficiaries of this largesse on the part of the Warner management include Ross Conklin and John Singerhoff, of The Post; William Crawford and Leo Fitzgerald, of the News; George Hurd and William Tarver, of the Star; Harry Gobbett and Richard Baker, Times, and Jack Hausman, Herald.

Mrs. L. Cloud, 2800 Ontario road northwest, writes with some asperity that while this column seems only now to be getting around to the casting of "Gone With the Wind"—an item which she evidently thinks should have been attended to months ago—she still will condescend to turn in her choices for the major assignments. For Rhett Butler, she nominates, in no uncertain fashion and with scorn and contumely for all other aspirants for the role, Ronald Colman. For Scarlett O'Hara, Mrs. Cloud places in nomination Constance Bennett, with the proviso, "true she is not Southern and she is not dark-haired." For Ashley Wilkes, Melanie and Aunt Pitty, Franchot Tone, Margaret Sullavan and Spring Byington.

The polls are still open.

Metropolitan

"CAIN AND MABEL." Warner Brothers-Cosmopolitan picturization of a story by H. C. Witwer, costarring Marion Davies and Clark Gable, supported by Roscoe Karns, Walter Catlett, William Collier, sr., Ruth Donnelly, Peri Kelton, David Carlyle, Hobart Cavanaugh, Allen Jenkins, E. E. Clive and Sammy White. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed (repeat engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With a Broadway theme into which love comes via Madison Square Garden and the musical comedy stage, "Cain and Mabel" returns to the Metropolitan Theater to regale the public with a cinematized H. C. Witwer yarn, embellished with songs and spectacular production numbers.

Marion Davies and Clark Gable share top honors (with Mr. Gable appropriating more than mayhap a gentleman should), but not without giving William Collier, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly and David Carlyle some opportunity to present those things which they do so well.

In the musical aspects of the piece, the "I'll Sing You a Thousand Love Songs" production number is especially notable, closely approaching the magnitude exemplified by "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," in "The Great Ziegfeld."

But considered in its entirety, "Cain and Mabel" is smart, wise-cracking entertainment, made the more pleasureable by being offered by two who are adept at putting across this particular type of story.

"Toy-Town Hall," a color cartoonal burlesque of the radio program, "An Ounce of Invention," a clever comedy, written about desirable, but as yet uninvented, gadgets, and releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels, round out the program.

Drowning Survivor Quits U. S. Position

J. Chase McKenzie, sole survivor of a drowning tragedy in Chesapeake Bay a month ago, has resigned his position as senior examiner in charge of marine casualty prevention, it was announced by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation yesterday.

McKenzie said ill health since the experience did not permit him to continue his work. He also explained the nature of his job recalled too tragically the death of three lawyer colleagues in his department who drowned while on a week-end sailing party on his sloop.

His resignation, dated November 2, is effective as of today. He plans to return to the practice of private law with his former associate, William E. Leahy. McKenzie, at the time of the triple drowning, expressed doubt he would continue with the bureau. Among his chief duties there was the prevention of marine accidents.

Famous English Composer Is Dead

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—Sir Edward German, noted composer, died today. He was 74 years old.

Educated at the Royal Academy of Music, Sir Edward German devoted most of his life to composition, but conducted at most of the great music festivals of his time.

In 1934 he was awarded the gold medal of the Royal Harmonic Society.

His first orchestral publication, in 1889, was the music to Richard III. He also wrote the music to "Romeo and Juliet," "As You Like It" and "Much Ado About Nothing" before the turn of the century, and in 1901 composed the operetta, "The Rival Poets." Among his later works were the comic opera "Tom Jones," the coronation hymn performed in Westminster Abbey at the coronation of King George V in 1911, and the "Just So Songbook," with Rudyard Kipling.

Four Spaniards Seized In Mexico City Arson

Mexico City, Nov. 11 (AP).—Four Spaniards, accused by police of attempting to burn the diplomatic missions of Guatemala and Salvador because those governments have recognized the Spanish insurgents, were arrested today.

Authorities said the group set fires at the buildings shortly after midnight, but that the flames were quickly extinguished and caused no material damage.

The Guatemalan Ambassador, Manuel Echeverria y Vidaurre, issued a statement saying the Mexican government had given "entire satisfaction" and had promised to punish the guilty persons.

Shakespeare Tragedy

IRENE WINSTON, who appeared in "Boy Meets Girl," has devoted her career to comedienne roles—aspiring, however, for the greater things. Thus, when she read that Max Gordon was presenting Walter Huston in "Othello," Irene purchased a copy of Shakespeare's works, read and re-read "Othello" until she determined that the role of Bianca, the maid, was ideal for her espabilites. She memorized every line of that role and then presented herself at the Gordon offices . . . "I want a job in 'Othello,'" she told Paul Porter, Gordon's manager. He laughed, for it seemed incongruous . . . "But I've played Shakespeare," she persisted. "As a matter of fact, I played 'Othello.' Listen." . . . And with perfect gestures, Miss Winston recited the Bianca lines. Porter applauded . . . "Well," she asked, "do I get the job?" . . . "No," he replied. "We're using the Edwin Booth version of 'Othello.' There's no Bianca in it!"

Sittin' Around.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11.

Every studio cafe has its "head table," where sits the Queen Bee of the lot. R. K. O. studio has two head tables, and here is the answer: Both Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers like to be literally surrounded by men at lunch. But Katty was employed by R. K. O. before Ginger, and by right of precedence she reigned at the original big table near the door, where she daily sat with her men-in-waiting.

LILY PONS.

When Ginger came along, someing had to be done about it, so the second table was installed. Now, if both actresses lunch at the same time, each has her own private roost over which to rule. It is amusing to observe how carefully nonpartisans of their camp divide their attentons, today sitting with Miss Hepburns, tomorrow with Miss Rogers.

• • • •

After weeks of filming, studio officials still have no title for the Lily Pons-Gene Raymond picture, so it is referred to as "that" picture, much as you speak of a man whose name you have forgotten as "he."

In the cast of the Pons picture is Mischa Auer. Until a few weeks ago his long, expressionless face apparrently marked him as another ham actor, doomed to tread the boulevards. One day he conceived the bright idea of adding comedy to his Shakespearean tragedy, and overnight he became a sensation (see "My Man Godfrey" and "The Gay Desperado"). He calls his new type of acting "the Shakespearean strut."

Opposite Tracy plays Margot Grahame. When you see her on the screen, watch for the sapphire and diamond ring, shaped into two small hearts, on the little finger of her left hand. It orignally belonged to Sarah Bernhardt, who gave it to Ellen Terry, who in turn passed it on to Julia Neilson. Miss Neilson presented it to Mary Glynn and Mary gave it to Margot. The tradition of the ring is that only fine actresses may wear it. Curiously.

Noel Coward Will Continue Next Week In His Cycle of One-Act Dramalets

Author-Actor-Director Is Aligned Against Prime Photoplay Product.

The third bill—the second is reviewed in this issue of The Post in the city edition—of Noel Coward's series of nine one-act plays, which are being presented three at a time, will be offered in the National Theater tomorrow night. These are treats, in abbreviated dramaturgy that no advocate of the best in the theater can afford to miss. Mr. Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Joyce Carey and their associate players will be seen for a second week in the National in the plays which they will have introduced this week in their three "first nights."

Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea come to the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow in "Adventure in Manhattan," a new Columbia Pictures production that concerns a beautiful young actress and a writer of detective fiction. The story centers in the perspicacity of a crime writer who predicts crimes long before they actually occur. On the stage, "The Medicine Man of the Blues," who is by way of being Ted Lewis, the high-hatted tragedian of jazz, will headline the bill with his orchestra. Among his associate artists, Mr. Lewis will present the Radio Aces, Edna Strong, Nascha and Charlie "Snowball" Whittier, Ted's "Shadow" in that famous "Me and My Shadow" number.

Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan are once more "Mr. and Mrs. Tarzan" in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Tarzan Escapes," to be seen for the first time in Washington on the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is one more chapter in the jungle romance conceived and written with such charm by Edgar Rice Burroughs. Other important actors in the film are Tarzans, the diminutive chimpanzee, and Reptina, the boa constrictor that is reputedly one of Johnny Weissmuller's favorite pets. Both were recent visitors at the desk of this column. On the stage the Capitol offers a Columbia Broadcast System Radio Revue, headed by Ray Perkins; Patti Chapin, "lady of melody," and Emery Deutsch and his Gypsy violin. Others on the bill are the Buccaneers, Vic Laurie and Stuart and Lea.

At RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning tomorrow, the chief feature of the bill will be "The Smartest Girl in Town," in which the stellar roles are played by Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond, supported by Helen Broderick, Eric Blore, Erik Rhodes and a fine cast of supporting comics. The bill will, as usual, be augmented by a varied list of supplementary features, including a new issue of the Pathe News.

"Libeled Lady," that gay and inconsequential charade in which the principal roles are played by William Powell, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy and Walter Connolly, as was to have been expected, goes into a second week at Loew's Palace tomorrow. The secondary attractions also will be retained for the second week.

The Belasco Theater is sailing along under a fine headwind of box-office patronage with "Carnival in Flanders," one of the most amusing comedies that has come out of France in decades on end. The story is ribald and a little suggestive, but so admirably done that it deserves wholehearted support—which it seems to be getting.

In "The Yellow Cruise," the Little Theater, beginning today, offers a minute cinematographic study of the progress of one of the most important junkets ever launched across the heart of Asia. The Citroen-Haardt Central Asia Expedition provided the subject matter of the picture by pursuing the course followed by one Marco Polo—with extremely dramatic results.

"San Francisco," Woody S. Van Dyke's admirable picturization of a fictional story with the famous quake and fire of 1906 as background is being revived, beginning today at the Rialto Theater. Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald appear in the co-stellar roles—but the earthquake sequences "steal the show."

"The Big Broadcast of 1937" opens a repeat engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater today, with Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Benny Fields and scores of others in the principal roles. Starts a little slowly, but finishes with a resounding "bang."

Beginning with the Sunday matinee performance, the Gayety Theater will present a new Independent Burlesque Association attraction, in which the principal comic roles will be essayed by Billy Fields, making his first local appearance of the season, and Harry "Boob" Evanson. The feminine contingent will be led by Jean Lee and the provocative and classy Evelyn Whitney.

Farley Leaves U. S. For Irish Vacation

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, sailed on the S. S. Normandie today for a vacation in Ireland with the words, "Prosperity is upon us."

Hundreds of persons crowded at the pier to bid him good-by. Among them was President Roosevelt's daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, and Mr. and Mrs. James J. Walker.

"All Americans are thinking the same way," said Farley. "Politics is behind us and prosperity is upon us.

"We all, Democrats and Republicans, are pulling together to help the President make things even better—to make it a new era of good feeling—just as followed James Monroe's election when he won by a great sweep in 1820.

"I want to say thanks with all my heart for the kind things that have been said about what I was able to do. I have already forgotten the unkind words. I'll be back in a few weeks, eager to go to work."

Open at RKO-Keith's Tomorrow

When she appeared on the stage of the National Theater in "America's Sweetheart," she was kown as Harriette Lake and her co-star was Jack White. Here we have the same young woman pictured as Ann Sothern and her screen partner is Gene Raymond. They are to be seen together in "The Smartest Girl in Town," on the screen at RKO-Keith's beginning tomorrow.

Noel Coward continued to unfold the generous scope of his versatility in the National Theater last night with the second of his three bills of one-act plays to be presented during his fortnight's stay in the National Capital.

The trilogy of short pieces presented last evening elicited the same voluminous applause as greeted the star, Gertrude Lawrence and their associates upon the illustrious occasion of last Monday night's opening of the engagement. Mr. Coward, after innumerable final curtain calls, finally acceded to the demand for a brief speech and made it practically as brief as possible, precisely as was done on Monday night.

This is a revival of a noble custom in the theater, this business of the curtain speech, and it adds no end to the glamour of first-nights in the theater.

A first night in the theater at one of these Noel Coward carnivals of diversified drama, however, needs no artificial accretion of glamour to make it memorable. Last evening's playlets, for example, were of such variety as to compel an enthusiastic audience's complete admiration of the author's ability to gather a wide range of topics into his evening's frolic as well as to lend their enactment a touch of that sort of catholic treatment that must hold something for every theatrical taste.

Two Plays in Same Key.

It seems to me that "We Were Dancing," the first play of last night's triple bill, adhered a little too closely to the spirit and tempo of "Hands Across the Sea," opening item of the week's first bill, to be completely effective, but this is an objection, of course, in which those who did not witness Monday night's program will have no interest whatever. Nevertheless, the playlet embodied much of the same sort of transparent humor as characterized the earlier skit.

I wish to go on record at once, before these hurried midnight remarks get too far along, that it is no part of the function of these summaries to indicate a too-serious conception of what it is Mr. Coward is aiming at in these one-act plays of his.

I suspect that he entertains no notion whatever that he is a second Shakespeare, or that the present grist of plays was contrived for anything beyond an evening's genial skillful and variegated amusement. The plays that I have seen so far—six out of the nine—have betrayed a completely admirable inclination to cater to mass taste and provide a degree of good "theater" that the present-day stage seldom encounters.

A Henpecked Hero.

To me, last night, the most effective of the Coward conceits was the second number on the bill—"Fumed Oak," the story of a henpecked husband who finally finds the stamina to cast off the shackles of 13 years of married life and tell his family where to head in. This is a superb bit of the spirit of Gaspar Milquetoast, blown up to the point where it explodes.

"Shadow Play," third of last night's triumvirate, seemed to me the weakest of the three. There is too much striving for effect and too little realism here to carry more than the merest modicum of conviction, and one feels, after it is all over, that Mr. Coward has been writing for his own amazement, rather than for any definite appeal to the sense of his audience.

Into the first and third of these plays there has been interwoven some of the tuneful Coward melodies that occasionally seem wholly in keeping with the plot development and again seem wholly out of key with the temper of the whole business.

The cast with which the author-star has surrounded himself is beyond reproach.

Gertrudet Lawrence in these sketches becomes more and more an artiste of the first rank, whose ability to encompass any mood, any tempo and any requirement of the mimetic art is no less than astounding.

A close second to her is Joyce Carey, and hot on her heels come such splendid players at Moya Nugeent, Alan Webb, Anthony Pelissier, Kenneth Carten, Joan Swinstead, Edward Underdtown and the others named in the casts reproduced at the head of this column.

There is a demonstration of first-grade theater going on at the National that no lover of the stage should permit himself to miss.

Mrs. Ely Culbertson on Contract

A Revealing Double.

It is more or less common for players to interpolate penalty doubles, even though from the previous bidding they feel that the suit they are doubling will not be selected as a final contract. They do this with the airy assumption that at least they are losing nothing. The fact of the matter is quite to the contrary. A penalty double carries definite implications, and this applies whether the double actually stands or is swept away by the opponents running out to another suit. Consider today's hand!

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable:
Thirty part-score.

	♠ A K J ♡ Q 6 5 2 ◇ A 7 6 ♣ A 9 8
♠ 9 8 ♡ 7 ◇ Q J 10 3 2 ♣ K Q 10 5 4	North West East South	♠ 5 4 3 ♡ A J 10 8 ◇ K 5 4 ♣ J 3 2
	♠ Q 10 7 6 2 ♡ K 9 4 3 ◇ 9 8 ♣ 7 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Double	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

It is quite true that after his partner's bid East should have felt he could defeat a three heart contract. But his confidence should have been based on his heart holding itself, and this holding depended for its effectiveness on its being undisclosed to the declarer. A double but his apparently certain margin of safety down to one trick, and this was too close for comfort. In the subsequent play, the declarer at least was grateful for the information East's double had given him.

West opened the King of clubs, dummy won with the Ace, and drew two rounds of trumps. Then the Queen of hearts was laid down (to guard against a singleton honor in West's hand). East won with the Ace, and returned the club Jack which held the trick, and on a club continuation declarer threw off a diamond loser. Now on a diamond lead, dummy's Ace won, and a low heart was led. East tried desperately to recoup from the bad position in which his three heart double had placed him. He saw that it would be giving up to split his honors, and, therefore, played the eight-spot, hoping that declarer would never have the nerve to finesse the nine. But the declarer had no doubt whatever that East had started with four hearts to justify his three heart double, and now played the nine from his own hand. He drew trumps and finally conceded a heart trick, thus making his contract.

Bride-to-Be By Vida Hurst

Synopsis.

Becky Starn is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, owner of a prosperous paper manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, she has been working in his home, where she has had to discourage the attentions of Francis, jr., a madcap youth of her own age. Here also she has met and become more than casually interested in Philip Rhodes, architect nephew of her employer, who has just returned after eight years in Mexico. Philip has a broken arm and Becky is called on to do some work for him. Also interested in Philip is Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow whom Philip had loved before her marriage.

Philip's Aunt Molly Rhodes and his married cousin, Regina, are fond of Lelia and determined to see the match made. They constantly invite Lelia to the Rhodes home and, after two weeks, give a big dinner party in the preparation for which they both call upon Becky for so many duties in addition to her regular work that she is utterly exhausted. For the first time in her life she envies the riches of such people as Regina and Lelia.

CHAPTER THREE.

In spite of her fatigue, perhaps because of it, Becky was unable to sleep the night of the Rhodes' dinner party. The picture of Philip and Lelia sitting side by side haunted her dreams. Suppose, in spite of what Philip had said to the contrary, they should surprise his aunt by announcing their engagement! Philip, sitting at his aunt's right, could easily whisper into her ear the longed-for news.

Becky would imagine the expression on Molly Rhodes' face. The incredulity swiftly changing to delight.

"My dear boy. How perfectly wonderful."

Good Alliance.

Her round, little eyes would pop with importance. Her voice would coo as she repeated the good tidings. Philip's marriage to the wealthy young widow would be as satisfactory an alliance as her own daughter's to Albert Little. Becky knew that such things mattered to Mrs. Francis Rhodes. In the bosom of her family, which included her husband's secretary, she frankly spoke of persons in terms of wealth or position, while Becky's mother, whose ancestors had been famous in the making of American history, selected her friends according to her own standards of intellect and breeding.

Tossing restlessly, Becky rehearsed everything that had happened since Philip's arrival. For some incomprehensible reason, her life seemed to have been different since then. She remembered how she had returned to the flat and looked at the familiar faces of the twins with a feeling of surprise as if they had changed since she had seen them last.

"I was the one who had changed," she admitted. "But why? Philip is nothing to me. Never can be anything."

Even as she thought it her cheeks burned with the sudden knowledge that whether he could or not she was in love with him. Desperately, hopelessly in love with a man she could not have. A man who had loved another woman for eight years; who had come all the way from Mexico to marry her even after she had jilted him for someone else. The irony of it made Becky wince. Yet stronger than her own humiliation was her passionate sympathy for Philip. His love for Lelia had marked his face with a bitterness no happiness could entirely erase. Lelia had hurt him as Becky couldn't. Yet it was Lelia he still loved.

No Justice.

Well, she thought, there is no justice in such matters. No reason for the undisciplined dictates of one's heart. If there were, she herself would never have chosen to fall in love with a man so utterly out of her reach.

"I'm just as silly as that scatter-brained Vinton child who is in love with Francis," decided Becky. "But at least I needn't act like her. I may not be able to control my feelings, but I certainly can the way I act about it."

It was dawn before she finally slept and Jinny called her at 7:30.

"Breakfast's ready, Becky!"

She opened her eyes reluctantly.

"I'm too tired to eat," she murmured.

Her mother, neat and efficient, appeared in the doorway.

"What's the matter with you, Becky? I've never known you to act like this before."

"Never felt this way before," Becky admitted, glad her mother did not understand what she really meant.

"Are you taking cold?" Josephine Stern demanded.

Becky sighed and thrust her feet into red kid slippers.

Don't Worry.

"No, darling! Don't worry about me!"

"Would you like to have your breakfast in bed?" her mother asked.

"You must be worried to suggest it," Becky answered. "I'll be all right soon as I've had my shower."

Nevertheless she sat at the breakfast table lifting her coffee cup with hands that shook. So this was love! This astonishing revelation which pierced you like a sword. Binding your fate to that of a man who didn't even want you. Making you more susceptible to his suffering than you were to your own.

"No wonder I'm nervous! This is what has been the matter with me for two weeks and I didn't know it."

She had hoped her first and only love affair would be the sort of romantic adventure which might possibly happen on a ship on her way to a foreign country. How different the reality! Her love, which had come to her in the guise of compassion, had hurt from the moment she saw him. Not laughter but a dark, sweet pain, which clutched her heart and made it ache until she could never be the same again. That was her love for Philip.

She, the unsentimental and independent, had melted overnight into a creature as sensitive and imaginative as any clinging vine. Her eyes reflected in the mirror of the old-fashioned sideboard were heavy with her secret. Her clear, olive skin was pale. Her generous, young mouth looked sad. But the thin printed silk she wore was smartly attractive. Although a small amount of her salary was applied on the family grocery bill, there was plenty left for the inexpensive garments which Becky bought and her mother had a way of making fit until they looked as if they had been tailored. Even Regina had asked her where she bought her clothes and been amazed when Becky told her.

"I've never seen anything there I would wear," she had said tactlessly, doubting if Becky had told her the truth.

The print dress and plain dark coat were perfect for a foggy day and Becky looked like one of Regina's friends as she entered the library. It was the only room which had been put in order since the night before, although Ralph was busy with the vacuum cleaner.

Mr. Rhodes appeared looking wearier than usual.

"Thank goodness we don't have a dinner party every day in the week," he said. "I'm going to lock myself in my room the next time."

He had had an answer to his letter about Francis, jr's, course at Stanford and was visibly depressed about the fact that it could take his son an extra year to finish it.

"He'll never be graduated at this rate," he complained. "Not that he's any good at anything else either. He's supposed to work at the factory in the summers but he takes no interest in it. Half the time, they tell me, he doesn't even show up."

"Why don't you make him work for somebody else?"

Going to Move.

"How can I when it is so imperative that he should learn the paper business? He's the only son I have, you know. If he were only like Philip. Made his own way ever since he was out of college. My brother and his wife were killed in a train wreck and left only a small estate, most of which went for Philip's education. But has he ever asked me for a penny? Absolutely not! He isn't even going to live with us."

Becky's heart sank. If he didn't live here she would never see him.

"He isn't! When did he decide that?"

"He told me yesterday he intended to rent an apartment for himself as soon as he looks around a bit."

For a moment Becky feared her premonition of the night before had proved correct. That Phillip and Lelia had surprised his aunt by announcing their engagement. She drew a breath of relief as her employer continued. "My wife has an idea he is planning to get married but I don't think such a thing is in his mind."

"But you've admitted that he never takes anyone into his confidence," she reminded him.

"That's true, but I don't think Phillip wants to get married now. He's changed since he went to Mexico. He's not a boy any more."

Becky could have kissed him for his reassurance. Not that it meant much in the face of Phillip's behavior.

As she sat at her typewriter she began to feel the effect of her sleepless night. Her head ached intolerably and when Mr. Rhodes suggested that she rest while he went for his drive she decided to take his suggestion.

"I understand you had a pretty hard day of it yesterday," he said kindly.

Feeling that this was true, Becky lay down upon the library davenport and closed her eyes. She had intended to read but the moment she stretched her tired body upon the cushions she fell asleep. She was wakened by the pressure of determined lips upon her own.

"The map fades out," the script concludes, and the characters "become dim as a Social Security Account card fills the screen. Slowly they change into elderly people, all smiling. As the social security card fades out, their heads appear more clearly. Then all heads fade out in unison, while the voice comments:

"These are typical of America's millions who will receive monthly incomes for life when they retire at 65. The social security act is for your benefit. Act promptly—take advantage of it."

The film will be previewed by officials and correspondents at the Interior Building auditorium at 3 p. m. today.

Lower Foods In October Cut Cost of Living

Rents, Clothing and Coal Are Higher for the Month.

New York, Nov. 11.—In consequence of a substantial reduction in food prices, the cost of living of wage-earners in the United States declined 0.2 per cent from September to October. The cost of each other group of expenditures into which the budget is divided, however, rose during this month interval. Living costs in October of this year were 3.3 per cent higher than in October, 1935, and 19.5 per cent higher than in April, 1933, the low point of the depression, but 15.3 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

Food prices declined 1.7 per cent from September to October, which is contrary to the usual seasonal movement. Since October, 1935, however, food prices have risen 3.3 per cent and since the low of 1933, 38.5 per cent. In October of this year food prices were still 23.0 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

Rents increased 0.6 per cent from September to October, which raised them 11.1 per cent above the level of a year ago and 28.9 per cent above the low point of January, 1934. In October, 1936, rents were only 12.3 per cent below the October, 1929, level.

Clothing prices advanced 0.3 per cent from September to October. Although in October, 1936, clothing prices were 0.8 per cent lower than in October, 1935, and still 25.5 per cent below their October, 1929, level, they were 21.6 per cent higher than at the low point of 1933.

Coal prices advanced seasonally 1.1 per cent. They were slightly, 0.2 per cent, above those of October, 1935, but 7.9 per cent below the October, 1929 level.

The cost of sundries increased 0.4 per cent from September to October, chiefly in consequence of increases in the admission charges to motion-picture theaters, information concerning which is collected as of October each year, and also because of a more moderate increase in the cost of house furnishings. The cost of sundries in October, 1936, was 0.9 per cent higher than in October, 1935, and 5.2 per cent higher than at the low of 1933, but 5.0 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 116.7 cents in October, 1936, as compared with 116.4 cents in September, 1936, 120.5 cents in October, 1935, and 100 cents in 1923.

The wage dividend, a million dollars larger than in 1936, is payable March 1, 1937.

Each employe who has completed five years' service on December 26 and who is in the service of the company March 1, 1937, will receive a check for a little more than four times his average wage per week during the last five years.

Steel Industry Now Awaiting Price Advance

Increase Will Be Sequence of $60,000,000 Rise in Wages.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—Higher prices for steel products and pig iron probably will be announced shortly as a sequence of advances in steel wages, which will add upward of $60,000,000 annually to the industry's pay roll, Iron Age said today in the weekly review of steel.

"It is believed that quotations for the first quarter may be $2 up for semi-finished steel, bars, shapes and plates and $3 on light products, excepting tin plate, on which the current price may carry through the 1937 season," the review says. "Pig iron may be $1 or $2 higher.

"Official announcements of new prices are likely to be withheld until complete acceptance of the wage offers has been obtained from steel company employes."

Steel backlogs, except in sheets, the trade journal says, are being reduced through an excess of shipments over incoming business, but prospective price advances are counted upon to bring a fresh surge of buying which may load up mill books during December, when ordinarily a seasonal decline occurs. In sheets, however, mills are virtually sold out for the remainder of the year, one Ohio maker having withdrawn from the market.

"Minor fluctuations in steel plant operations may occur over the next few weeks, but there are no indications of a sharp decline in production, which this week remains at substantially last week's level of 74½ per cent," the review says.

Fur Sales Lead Luxury Boom In 3d Quarter

Furniture, Sports Goods and Luggage Also Make Large Gains.

Minneapolis, Nov. 11.—Fur coats led booming "prosperity goods" sales in the third quarter of 1936. Family buying of home furniture also soared far above totals for the same period last year, paralleling wide gains by such pure luxury lines as sporting goods and luggage, according to the current survey of 236 department stores by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

While part of the broad increase in retail sales is accounted for by the growing volume of instalment purchases of such items as pianos, household furniture and electric appliances, the survey points out that sporting goods and luggage are principally cash or ordinary 30-day open account purchases. Freer spending of ready cash is also notably demonstrated in the 23 per cent increase in volume of football, theater and other amusement admissions, as compared with the third quarter of last year.

After showing successive and large increases in sales volume in 1934 and 1935, furs in the first nine months of 1936 scored a further gain of 27.3 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. The third quarter of 1936 was 32.6 per cent above the third quarter of last year. August is traditionally the largest month in the year for retail sales of furs, but in a number of cities, particularly in the North Central States, September topped August this year, while October business is holding up remarkably.

The new cars went on display here today at the Ford-Lincoln Automobile Show. They will be shown for the first time in Chicago Saturday at the opening of the National Automobile Show, and will also go on display the same day in Ford Dealers showrooms throughout the United States.

The new low base price is for the five-window coupe powered with the new 60-horsepower engine. The base price of the 1936 Ford line powered with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine was $510.

Reels Off 6 Goals After Frisco U. Scores 2 in First Half.

20,000 See Tide Turn Suddenly With Wild Scoring Spree.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—Red-pantaloned gridiron raiders from Texas A. & M. who did everything with a football but balance it on their ears, routed the University of San Francisco, 38 to 14, today.

Twenty thousand fans, hardly able to believe their eyes, watched the contenders for the Southwest Conference championship run up a track-meet score on a team which only a few weeks ago held St. Mary's Gaels to a scoreless tie.

The game started and ended in spectacular fashion. San Francisco scored two touchdowns within ten minutes of the first period, after recovered fumbles and went off the field at half-time with a comfortable lead of 14 to 0.

Scoring Spree Is Sudden.

But fans had hardly squirmed into their seats for the second half before the fireworks started. Before they ended, the wild running, pass-snatching Texans had reeled off six touchdowns, three each in the last two quarters.

Leftend Bedoni scored the first San Francisco touchdown at the end of a 61-yard drive. Fullback Ray Peterson went over from the 2-yard marker for the second score.

The second half told the real story of the game. On the first play, Right Half Jim Shockey passed to Lefthalf Manning for 13 yards and the latter ran 80 yards to score. Two minutes later Quarterback Dick Vitek caught a punt on his own 32 and galloped 68 yards for another touchdown.

Vitek had hardly caught his breath when he was off again. He returned a punt 47 yards to the 1-foot line and a goal followed.

Fakes Pass, Runs 57 Yards.

In the fourth quarter, Shockey faked a pass and ran through the opposing team 57 yards. Soon afterward he passed to Nesrsta from the 6-yard line, the latter making a one-handed catch on the goal line. Not much later, 'Slick' Rogers, substitute halfback, intercepted a pass and ran 60 yards for the sixth touchdown.

Cleveland Beats Boston, 34-26, In Wild Tilt

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 11 (AP).—The Cleveland Rams whirled into first place in the American Professional Football League today by defeating the Boston Shamrocks, 34 to 26, in one of the wildest pro games Boston fans have ever seen.

Cleveland, noted in its home territory for a razzle-dazzle air attack, treated the approximately 10,000 Armistice Day fans to every variation of its offense.

The teams entered the battle tied for the league leadership.

Shuttle passes, shovel passes, flat passes and now and then good old-fashioned line bucking contributed to the scores that see-sawed back and forth evenly.

The teams arrived at the last five-minute mark with the Rams leading, 27 to 26. The battle appeared to have sapped all of Boston's energy at that point, and Cleveland marched 75 yards in those last few minutes to clinch the victory.

Mike Sebastian, Cleveland right halfback, plunged through right tackle on reverse plays for four successive first downs. Sebastian, using the same old reverse play, scored on the fourth.

Texas Tech's Passes Win for Loyola, 26-7

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP).—Texas Tech gambled through the air today with Loyola University and lost a thrilling football game, 26 to 7, before 35,000 fans.

The Red Raiders scored in the first period when Maurice Chernosky, halfback, intercepted a Lion pass and galloped 45 yards.

Loyola turned Tech fumbles into its first two touchdowns, and showed the Texans a thing or two about the overhead game by scoring twice on perfectly heaved throws.

His contract here expires after this season.

"I told them I would talk to them after December 1," Anderson commented.

Bowie's 15-Day Meet Opens Today

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Racing a la Prince Georges County will be offered turf fans of this section starting today at the Bowie, Md., plant of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association. The 15-day meeting at the course just off the Defense highway will mark the last lap of the major racing season in Maryland and promises to be the most successful since the boom days.

With no purse less than $1,000 and with only little opposition on this side of the continent, Bowie is drawing the best class of horses to be seen at the track for many years. Likewise, it is assured the tops in jockeys. In addition, the come-back money will flow in to boost the betting totals. All that is needed is a continuance of the good weather that has marked racing in the State.

Track Wins Prominence.

Bowie, the newest of the Maryland courses and for years regarded as little more than an exaggerated country fair, has gradually earned its place among the Nation's major tracks. The current session calls for six stake races and, although the best added money is $5,000, the contests, involving an assortment of ages, promise good competition.

Today's program is headed by the Bowie Claiming Stakes, a test of a mile and a sixteenth and carrying an added value of $2,000. The overnight entries reveal a compact of six good route horses. E. K. Bryson's Calumet Dick is likely to be installed the favorite. Winner of two races at Pimlico, he is at the peak of his form. Silent Shot, Lemont, Ward-in-Chancery, Caught and Prince Abbot will complete the field.

The type of soil at Bowie does not fit the steeplechaser aces and all events are confined to the flat. Today's stake is supported by six events which have drawn large fields. The sixth and seventh races should prove interesting, being at a mile and three-sixteenths.

In addition to having good roads for those who use their own cars, Bowie will have train service, via the Pennsylvania Railroad direct to the track, while the usual busses from Washington to the plant will be operating.

Post time for the first race is 1:30 o'clock. The daily double again will be based on the first and third races, with the windows closing on the twin wagers at 1:15 o'clock.

Army's Game With Irish A Sell-out

Notre Dame's 'Subway Alumni' Make Fray Box-Office Success.

Seat Sale Unique With Only 510 South Bend Grads in Gotham.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—This may be Armistice Day for the rest of the world, but there was no truce in the metropolitan area as thousands of Notre Dame "subway alumni" continued to battle valiantly with ticket scalpers—trying to purchase pasteboards for the big Army game without mortgaging their homes.

Never before has there been such a demand for tickets to the Army-Notre Dame classic. Accordingly the scalpers are reaping a richer harvest than usual. Regulation prices for Saturday's Soldier-Rambler game at Yankee Stadium were $4.40 and $6.60. But if you want to buy them now from the scalpers—and you can't get them any place else—you must pay from $10 up for the cheaper seats and from $20 up for the more expensive ones.

Could Sell 150,000 Seats.

J. Norbert Gelson, president of the city's Notre Dame Club, commented on the situation as follows: "At South Bend, Notre Dame's allotment for the game was sold out completely before September 12. That was the earliest ever. And they tell me Army's allotment was gone entirely before October 12. If we had 150,000 seats in Yankee Stadium we could have sold out every one of them this time. Unfortunately, the stadium's capacity is about 76,000."

Gelson added with a smile: "And did you know that there are only 510 actual Notre Dame alumni in the entire metropolitan area?"

Most of the tickets were gone long before the fans had any idea as to what kind of records the two elevens would pound out during the season or what their relative strengths would be when they collided at the stadium. The seats were sold before Notre Dame lost to Pittsburgh on October 24 and to Navy last week; also before Army was beaten by Colgate on October 31.

Unique Box-Office Success.

In other words you find people all over the country, and particularly in the choosey New York area, planking down their dollars to witness a game that may or may not be good. You'll find nothing like this in the entertainment world—at the box offices of stage or screen attractions where the patrons want to be assured by the four stars in the newspapers or by word of mouth that they are going to get their money's worth.

But is this really a case of pay your money and take a chance? I don't think so. You see, Army and Notre Dame have played 22 previous games. And never have the customers been disappointed. It is a "traditional classic"—not because of any clusters of ivy that may have grown about the encounter in 23 short years—but because of the traditionally top-flight football that the two institutions have played.

Year in and year out, regardless of the success of West Point and South Bend teams, you'll find these two outfits play the smartest football in all America. Other schools may flash over the Nation's gridirons with blinding brilliance at intervals—like Michigan, Princeton and Minnesota or Northwestern. But when you want assurance of stratosphere football—the ultimate in brains and brawn—year in and year out—the Nation turns to Army vs. Notre Dame. Such popularity, indeed, is deserved.

Army will take the field a slight favorite because of the Ramblers' defeat last week by Navy.

'Maltreated' Simmons Quits Iowa Grid Team

OZE SIMMONS.

By the Associated Press.

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 11.—Oze Simmons, University of Iowa Negro football star, told the Associated Press today that he would play no more football for Iowa.

He appeared at the practice field for a short period today, but left soon thereafter without comment.

Head Coach Ossie Solem could not be reached immediately for comment concerning the departure of the Negro ace.

"I dont' feel as if I've been treated right," Simmons told the Associated Press after reaching his fraternity house.

Simmons, leading ground gainer for the Hawkeye team, said Solem ordered him to leave the dressing room last Monday when the football squad was viewing pictures of the Iowa-Minnesota game.

Simmons said the head coach ordered him to "shut up" when he attempted to explain some faults in his (Simmons) blocking during the Minnesota game.

"Mr. Solem told me I had done little or nothing to win the game," Oze said, "and I just didn't think that was fair. I had to leave the dressing room in front of the entire squad."

At tonight's practice for the Purdue game Saturday, Simmons said Solem asked him to apologize to the squad, but that he refused.

"I just don't see any reason why I should apologize. I've played the best ball I could all season, and Mr. Solem's criticism just got me down," the Fort Worth, Tex., senior said.

Simmons had no criticism of his teammates.

"All the boys have co-operated with me and I believe they've done the best they could all season," Simmons said.

"I love football, but I don't feel I should apologize to anyone to be able to play," the Negro star said.

Simmons became a sensation in Big Ten football in his first performance in 1934. He raced 166 yards from scrimmage and returned punts 124 yards in his first game against Northwestern to take ranking with the finest offensive backs in the game.

In 1935 Oze was named on the Associated Press second All-America team as a halfback and was voted the State's most outstanding amateur athlete in a poll conducted by an Iowa newspaper.

"The Ebony Eel," as he became known to fans and sports writers, made five touchdown runs from 51 to 71 yards in 1935.

Simmons has not flashed the same brilliance during Iowa's 1936 season, but some observers said his failure to duplicate his 1934-35 performance was due to lack of proper blocking.

The Iowa team has lost three Big Ten games and tied one this fall.

Ettore Gains Draw With Chilean

By the United Press.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Al Ettore, blond Philadelphia Italian, and Arturo Godoy, copper-colored Chilean Indian, fought through 10 slow rounds to a draw before 3,500 fans in the Hippodrome tonight.

Ettore, trying for a comeback after his last ring appearance which ended in a knockout by Joe Louis, did not appear to have his usual speed and snap. But he managed to weather several bad moments when smashed on the chin by the wild-swinging Chilean and throw enough punches to get an even verdict.

The two judges, George Kelly and Charlie Devlin, and Referee Frankie Fullam disagreed in their balloting and the Mexican-standoff resulted. According to the United Press score sheet, Godoy should have won this second bout of his United States invasion. In his first New York appearance last month, the Chilean fought to a 10-round draw with Leroy Haynes, the Philadelphia Negro, whom Ettore beat three times. Hence Ettore was the favorite tonight.

The United Press score sheet gave Godoy five rounds, Ettore three and scored the fifth and seventh even.

Browns Planning To Play Night Ball

St. Louis, Nov. 11 (AP).—The Globe-Democrat said tonight that, with official approval by the American League tomorrow at Chicago, the group of St. Louis business men buying the Browns Baseball Club will ask the league to permit night baseball at Sportsmans' Park in 1937.

The paper said the group, headed by Donald L. Barnes, investment company president, will pay the Phil Ball estate, present owners, $325,000 cash for the club.

Barnes, the paper continued, will be club president while William O. De Witt, who has been assistant to Branch Rickey, Cardinal vice president will be vice president and general manager in active charge of the management.

Davis Cup Finals Dates Are Fixed

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—The British Lawn Tennis Association announced today the 1937 Davis Cup interzone-final matches, between the winners of the North American and European eliminations will be played probably at Wimbledon July 17, 19 and 20, followed a week later by the challenge round, July 24, 26 and 27, at Wimbledon.

The challenge round will see Great Britain defending the treasured trophy for the third consecutive year. Great Britain's chances of retaining the cup were seriously impaired two days ago when Fred Perry, mainstay of the defenders for four years, quit the amateur ranks for a professional career.

Guard Team Leading in Tourney

1,500 See Amateurs Vie for D. C. Titles in C. U. Gymnasium.

The District National Guard boxing team jumped into a decisive lead in the District Golden Gloves Tournament as the second night's punching passed into history in the Catholic University gymnasium last night.

A crowd of about 1,500 watched the Guardsmen advance three representatives through the quarter-finals in actual fights and the luck of the draw gave the last year's championship aggregation five more beak biffers in the semifinals, which will be held tonight.

Two fighters from the Terminal Y. M. C. A. banged their way into the semifinals and two more representatives of that club drew byes to reach that stage of the game, giving the Terminal the second largest representation still in the running.

Three Police Boys Score.

The Police Boys Club has three men in the semifinals, as has the recently organized Alexandria Boys Club, the Merrick Club and Northeast Boys Club. The luck of the draw put the lone Washington Boys Club fisticuffian in the finals of the 112-pound class, and the Fifth Marine Reservists' heavyweight likewise advanced to the finals by the passive route.

Last night's contests were filled with action and excitement from the novice classes right up to bouts involving the more experienced senior Golden Glove champions.

A 135-pound contest between El Brookman, of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5, and Whitey France, rugged little Terminal Y. M. C. A. boxer provided one of the highlights of the night. After a nip-and-tuck first round, Brookman had his left eye badly cut late in the second session.

Referee Denny Hughes examined the injury between rounds and decided it was not serious enough to justify his stopping the bout. Brookman's seconds had nothing in the corner to stop the bleeding, so

Chevigny's Job At Texas Gets No Takers

School Won't Pay Much for Successor to Coach Quitting Next Year.

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 11.—Speculation was rife today concerning a successor to Jack Chevigny, who will retire February 1 as head football coach at University of Texas.

But only this much was certain—Chevigny's successor won't be high-salaried.

"Because of the present set-up at the University, we will not be able to pay a top price," said Lutcher Stark, chairman of the board of regents.

"We likely won't be able to interest Dana X. Bible, of Nebraska; Ray Morrison, of Vanderbilt; Tiny Thornhill, of Stanford, or some of the other top-ranking coaches."

Chevigny, former assistant to the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame, announced his retirement last night.

J. C. Dolley, chairman of the athletic council, said that no applications had been received. He said he expected the matter to come before the council Monday but no immediate action was expected.

Chevigny is completing his third year as football coach here. His team placed second in the Southwest Conference and defeated Notre Dame, 7-6, in his first year. Last year the Longhorns shared the cellar with Texas A. & M. and this season have lost their four conference tilts thus far.

Clyde Littlefield, former head coach and now freshman football and track mentor here and Ted Twomey, Chevigny's chief assistant, were prominently mentioned by enthusiasts as Chevigny's successor.

Gould Hopes To Sidestep Contract

Garden Unlikely to Let Him Get Away With It if They Can Help.

Winner vs. Schmeling in Spring Is Seen as a Gold Mine.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—Maneuvering among the prize fight moguls to promote a title defense by Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock against Joe Louis began here today when Braddock was guaranteed $400,000 to meet the Detroit Negro in a 12-round bout at Atlantic City Auditorium February 22.

Although bound by an ironclad contract approved by the New York Athletic Commission to fight Max Schmeling, of Germany, for the crown next June, Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, accepted the offer of Herman Taylor, of Philadelphia, in the belief that he had a loophole through which to escape.

It might seem impossible to make such a huge guarantee for a winter bout in a place with a seating capacity of 42,000 which could hardly gross more than $500,000, but when the gate possibilities of a match between the winner and Schmeling in June are realized, it is easily apparent that the promoters could take a big loss, then make it up next summer.

Johnston Won't Agree.

Mike Jacobs, who holds contracts with both Louis and Schmeling, approved the proposed meeting of the Brown Bombei and Braddock only on the condition that the victor defend his title against the German in June.

However, Braddock is under contract to make his first crown defense under promotion of Madison Square Garden, and the Eighth avenue fight emporium has never been noted for its charities. Why should the Garder let Braddock fight this winter for 400,000 kopecks when a summer bout against Schmeling would draw twice as much? Unless Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston gets a finger in the promotion of the fight between the winner and Schmeling, it is a sure bet he will never agree to the proposed February brawl.

It was Johnston spouting off in London yesterday after the fight between Lightweight Champion John Henry Lewis and Len Harvey that gave Gould the idea he could sidestep his contract. Johnston said he thought Braddock should defend his title against Lewis instead of giving a foreigner a crack at it.

Because of its potentialities, the fight likely would be staged in Soldier Field, Chicago, or Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia.

Brooklyn Makes Whipping Finish to Win Walden Handicap

Silvo Coucci Rides Colt To Front

Bradley's Color Bearer Pays $8.50 Mutuel; Fervid Triumphs.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 11.—With Jockey Silvo Coucci from the Bronx beating on his flanks, E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn responded with a final burst of speed that carried him to victory in the thirty-first running of the historic Walden Handicap here this afternoon. Straining every muscle, the son of Blue Larkspur bounded over the finish line a length in front of Mary Hirsch's No Sir, with the Bomar Stables' Yellow Tulip third, a like distance away.

It was a brilliant comeback for Jockey Coucci as well as a game exhibition by the colt. Both should be mentioned in the same breath whenever today's race is a topic. Coucci, the boy they said lost his nerve, the boy who was only riding on his past reputation and the boy who Col. Bradley decided to give one more chance made good in a big way, in fact, Brooklyn, leading from the start, attempted to give up in the stretch but he found the Coucci of old in the saddle.

The Bradley color bearer was a second choice in the wagering and paid an $8.50 mutuel. His time for the mile and a sixteenth of 1:47 1-5 was ordinary for the race but the track was a dull one.

Brooklyn's name joins those of Ten Point, Double Eagle, War Cloud, War Pennant, Senator Norris, Mate, Mars, Single Foot and others which won this race in their juvenile year. He added $8,270 to his earnings, the first real money he has brought to owner Bradley.

A crowd of 12,000 watched the Armistice Day program under sunny skies.

The start of the Walden was good. Brooklyn was first to show in front and shook off Yellow Tulip in becoming the definite pace-setter swinging for the back stretch. No Sir came up on the outside, to be closest to the pace and Clodion, the heavily played favorite and winner of the Richard Johnson Stakes, next.

Clodion began to drop out of it midway of the back stretch, but No Sir was a tough customer. Leaving the back stretch, he came up on the outside of Brooklyn and the two went into the stretch teamed. As the eighth pole loomed ahead, several horses seemed on the verge of passing Brooklyn. It was at this point that Coucci began plying the whip that was to carve out the Bradley victory.

Pepper Patch won the seventh race at a $24.50 mutuel, leading all the way under the handling of Charlie Kurtsinger. My Peter finished second from a slow beginning and Ashen was third. Imperial Betsy chased the leader to the stretch and then stopped.

The finale of the day and the meeting went to Languorous at a $13.60 mutuel.

Fervid Is Winner.

Fervid, an ancient mare and long a popular Maryland horse, ran one of her occasional good races to defeat a field of 12 in the first race. She was ridden by Jockey Charley Kurtsinger and, coupled with Letter Box as an entry, paid a $45.80 mutuel. Spartan Lady was second and Highest Point third. This one tired badly after getting to the front while running in the role of an even money choice.

John K. Culver, jr., saw his colors triumph in the day's steeplechase event when Little Marty came from far back to defeat the Mill River Stables Clonard. Third money went to Quick Verdict. Clonard, guided by P. D. Reid, a gentleman rider, went out to a 25 length lead the first time around and staggered over the last jump ahead of Little Marty but the latter outran his rival on the flat to win by two lengths. Little Marty, handled by Jockey J. McGrath, paid a $6 mutuel.

Sir Kai surprised by taking the third race, a six-furlong sprint to pay a $25.40 mutuel. The Kai-Sang horse scored a neck decision over Anotherone, a much-alive paddock tip. Leana G. was third in the field of a dozen. Sangal, heavily played, got to the front but tired.

The fourth straight favorite bit the dust in the fourth race. The winner turned up in Eli Yale, a Greentree Stable colt ridden by Jockey Gilbert. Among others, Eli Yale defeated Prairie Dog and Masked General. For this race the public played Ocean Roll as if the race already had been run and the colt folded in the stretch after being closed to Eli Yale's swift pace.

Gilbert rode his second winner of the day aboard Panalong over the long mile and three-sixteenths course. Bulwark was second and Chatmoss third in the field of five. Penalong came through on the inside to take command at the far turn and held sway to the finish to pay a $9.80 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FERVID (entry), $45.80, $15.30, $11.30; SPARTAN LADY, $7.50, $3.90; HIGHEST POINT, $25.70.

FERVID sent to the outside for racing room midway of the backstretch, went to the leaders with a sharp move and under energetic handling, held sway over SPARTAN LADY at the end. The latter improved her position steadily, came between horses in the stretch and was wearing down the winner at the finish. HIGHEST POINT, a forward factor after a half, closed with excellent courage. WANDREL, shuffled back going to the first turn, closed willingly. APERITIF stopped after taking command leaving the backstretch. MANUAL and SKYRIDE stopped after settling and pressing the pace.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Consolation Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:02½. Winner, J. K. Culver, jr.'s, b. g. (4), by Lucky Hour—Elizabeth D. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:48. (13 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELI YALE, $14.00, $5.80, $5.40; PRAIRIE DOG, $4.70, $4.20; MASKED GENERAL, $7.90.

ELI YALE had high speed from the break, opened a good lead going to the far turn and was kept to a stout hand ride to the finish while holding PRAIRIE DOG safe. The latter came around horses to gain contention, came with a rush midway of the stretch, but hung at the end. MASKED GENERAL came from far back to close with good courage. THE RUNNER saved ground entering the stretch. OCEAN ROLL broke slowly, was hard ridden throughout, but dropped out of it after being close to the pace of ELI YALE to the stretch. ORIENT EXPRESS raced on the inside all the way and tired in the stretch. HAPPY NYMPH stumbled at the break, went to the leaders and then tired.

FIFTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000. The Annapolis Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:30½. Winner, F. J. Sundacher's b. c. (4), by Whiskaloma—Panella. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:40 2-5, 2:02.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANALONG, $9.80, $4.30, $2.70; BULWARK, $3.90, $2.70; CHATMOSS, $2.50.

PANALONG, lucky to find racing room on the inside approaching the far turn, went through to take command and held sway to the finish under a drive. BULWARK saved ground entering the stretch and came gamely for the final test. CHATMOSS pressed the early pace of ROWES CRUMP and tired in the stretch. OLD FIELD was under restraint to the stretch and was put to a drive too late to be effective. ROWES CRUMP stopped, due to hustling tactics while in front.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $7,500 added. The Walden Handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:06. Winner, E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKLYN, $8.50, $4.00, $3.90; NO SIR, $10.20, $7.10; YELLOW TULIP, $7.50.

BROOKLYN, speeding into the lead going to the first turn, was rated along in front, shook off repeated challenges from NO SIR when placed to drive and under severe pressure and excellently handled, held NO SIR safe at the end. The latter, showing sudden improvement, pressed the pace of BROOKLYN throughout and closed willingly. YELLOW TULIP, off the same with a clear path, raced evenly. MISTY BUD improved its position with a rush at the far turn and tired gradually. MERRY MAKER was kept on the rail throughout and faltered after reaching the leaders. CLODION could not keep up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Curtain Call. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:36½. Winner, M. M. Middleton's ch. f. (3), by Sixth Brook—Pepper Pot. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25, 0:50 1-5, 1:15 1-5, 1:42, 1:55 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEPPER PATCH, $24.50, $8.70, $4.60; MY PETER, $4.10, $3.10; ASHEN, $3.60.

PEPPER PATCH, nicely handled, was sent to the front at once, was rated along after gaining a good lead on the backstretch and rallied to close willingly under a drive. MY PETER, allowed to settle into stride, circled horses to gain contention and was closing well. ASHEN closed gamely after running evenly. IMPERIAL BETSY was used up chasing the pacemaker. FLAG OF WAR dropped out of it after being close to the pace. POOP DECK had no excuses. The others were outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Encore. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:04½. Winner, Mrs. F. Exposito's b. f. (4), by Sweep—Miss Jasbo. Trained by R. H. Shannon. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LANGUOROUS, $13.60, $5.30, $4.00; FOGARTY, $3.60, $2.90; CREDULOUS, $4.10.

LANGUOROUS, hard ridden to take command in the sprint to the first turn, was rated along ahead of CREDULOUS, rallied when placed to punishment entering the stretch and barely lasted ahead of FOGARTY. The latter, slow as usual to find his stride, improved his position steadily along the backstretch, was forced to go wide into the stretch for racing room and just missed. CREDULOUS pressed the pace for a mile and was tiring at the end. PAY RACK went evenly, but could not threaten. HAPPY FLAG had a rough trip and closed gamely.

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 11.

Dear Al:

Jockeys Westrope and Decamillis will get back in the saddle tomorrow, having served out their suspension. But somehow I'm going to miss Don Meade at this meeting. The cocky little fellow certainly ruled with a iron hand around here. He was cussed one race and applauded the next. There was something about him and the mystery surrounding his horses that made each race an adventure for those who bet with him or against him. General Manager Joseph Boyle has this place spic and span for tomorrow's opening program. The track is in excellent shape. The mutuel department has been dusted in anticipation of the flow of greenbacks and the Stevens forces are busy unloading liquor and food. Those pine trees along the backstretch look like home and that old house still stands at the head of the stretch. The track is trying hard to maintain the high standard of hospitality set by the late Thomas K. Lynch. Bowie will not use the camera on the seventh races during the meeting. Officials are unwilling to gamble with the photo at dusk and are ruling it out so that the customers can make a quicker get-away from the track. All of which is an excellent idea to my mind. Clocker Mike sends regards.

Devitt Gridmen Foe of Bullis Prep Today

Keen Rivals Seen Evenly Matched; Bullis Is Favored to Win.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Devitt Prep, an old school, and Bullis Prep, a new school which has become a stern competitor to Devitt in the race for students, will battle on the football field today in their fourth annual game at 3 p. m. in Central Stadium.

Keen rivals in more ways than one, the schools will take the field virtually even so far as physical strength is concerned. The Bullis line will average 174 to 173 for Devitt, while the latter's backfield tips the scales at a 168 average to 165 for Bullis.

For the first time Bullis enters the game the favorite to win. Although both teams beat National Training School, 26-0, Bullis lost to Massanutten Military Academy only 6-0, a team which trounced Staunton Military, 21-6. Devitt lost to Staunton, 20-0.

Coached by Pat Mahoney, former Western Maryland star, Bullis has rolled up 72 points in four games to 6 for the opposition. Only three of the starting line-up hail from Washington, while seven of the Devitt starters are well-known Washington grid products.

Have Big Line.

Hol Armstead, who didn't play when he went to Central, will be at right end and Clark Ford, of Monongahela, Pa., at the other wing. Don Vogts, a 197-pound Philadelphia boy, will be at one tackle and Ray Hastings, of Keene, N. H., at the other. Bob Viner, a Washington boy who didn't play football at Eastern, pairs with Ted Britton, of Houston, Tex., at guard, and Don Bones, 182-pound Pennsylvania boy, will be at center.

Ace of the Bullis squad is Joe McFadden, of Allentown, Pa., described by Coach Mahoney as one of the best schoolboy backs he ever saw. McFadden runs, kicks, passes and plays quarterback. He weighs 180. Cliff Lenz, of Latrobe, Pa., a 195-pounder; Howard Montgomery, of Washington, and Lucius Beebe, of Philadelphia, complete the backfield.

Despite its 20-0 defeat last week at the hands of Staunton Military, Devitt is primed for a rebound. Lee Fones, George Washington High's All-Virginia halfback, and Ben Cohen, former West Philadelphia High star, bear most of the Devitt ball-carrying hopes.

Charles Town Card Is Being Prepared

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 11.—The condition books for Charles Town races which open November 30 and continue through December 1 are now being prepared by Fred Burton, racing secretary and will be ready for distribution November 1.

There are now at the track 150 horses in training and schooling from the Bahr gates.

Horsemen say the track is in perfect condition.

A. J. Boyle, president and general manager, advises that special race trains will be run as usual from Baltimore and Washington daily direct to the track.

Boxing Heads Reverse Selves, Restore Furr's Welter Title

Lucas Legally Owns Crown After Win

Believed Move to Right a Bad Verdict; Portney to Be Suspended.

By Bill McCormick.

The boxing commission yesterday showed a reversal of form by restoring to Phillip Hamilton Furr the District welterweight championship. By every rule, regulation and precedent established by the Commissioners themselves, the local crown passed to Johnny Lucas, of Camden, N. J., on what most spectators thought a very bad decision at Turner's Arena last Monday night.

The moguls restored the championship to Furr because of Phillip's plea that he did not attempt to make the required 147-pound weight limit for the Lucas bout because he had not been notified it involved the title.

Under the rules of the commission itself, any 15-round fight involves the title if the challenger enters the ring under the required weight limit. Lucas weighed 144 pounds to Furr's 148 for the encounter. As a matter of fact, the commission previously had ruled that if the defending champion entered the ring over the weight limit, the title automatically passed to his opponent on the scales, providing, of course, that the opponent was under the limit.

Everett Was Dethroned.

Just a few weeks ago, the commission deprived Buck Everett of his heavyweight championship because he was knocked out by Bob Olin, of New York, in a bout which was not scheduled for 15 rounds. The rules of the commission specifically state that all championship bouts must be scheduled for 15 rounds, but the moguls of maul decided that because Everett had been knocked out, Olin won the title.

The general opinion among close observers of affairs fistic yesterday was that the commission was "trying to make a right with two wrongs." It is almost universally conceded that Lucas was not entitled to the unanimous decision which was given him at the end of the 15-round bout Monday night and most of those familiar with the situation believe the commissioners rendered their cock-eyed decision to right the wrong done by those who voted Lucas winner against Furr.

Portney to Be Suspended.

Jack Portney will be suspended by the National Boxing Association in all States and countries under its jurisdiction until such time as he fulfills a contract to box Phil Furr here, The Post has learned.

The Nation-wide ban on Portney has been asked by the District Boxing Commission and Executive Secretary Edward C. Foster, of the N. B. A., has indicated that the suspension will be put in effect within a few days.

Not only will Portney be suspended in the 39 States governed by the N. B. A., but, in accordance with a ruling recently adopted by the association, he can not box in States outside their jurisdiction.

Should Portney box in a State not affiliated with the N. B. A., such as New York, Pennsylvania or California, he will automatically be suspended for one year in the N. B. A. territory.

Portney was scheduled to fight Furr last summer in a 20-round bout. He claimed an injured hand and agreed to box Furr later. He has failed to fulfill his agreement.

25 Pros to Seek District Open Golf Crown

Competitive golf of a high caliber will be revived at Bannockburn's historic course tomorrow when a select field of 25 professionals and amateurs will battle over the 36-hole route in the second annual District Open championship.

Al Houghton, creator of the first District Open won last season at Indian Spring Country Club by the host professional, little George Diffenbaugh, announced last night that the tournament had the sanction of both th Middle Atlantic and District Golf Associations.

In his role as promotion manager at Bannockburn, where he first learned to play golf while caddying some 20 years ago, Houghton conceived the idea of holding the championship at one of the oldest courses in this section. The boys had practically forgotten all about the District Open, and Diffenbaugh figured he would remain champion without having to swing a club, until Maryland Open Champion Houghton broke into the picture.

Houghton, according to the pairings and starting times released last night, has rounded up the best pros and amateurs in this section. Diffenbaugh will play with Chevy Chase's Bob Barnett and Congressional's Roland Mackenzie in a feature threesome, starting at 9:20.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro; his brother, Glenn, of Strathmore, Baltimore; Walter Cunningham, of Burning Tree, and Al Treder, of Manor, are among other topnotchers entered.

Entry fee for pros is $5; for amateurs, $3. Houghton will accept post entries.

Bannockburn's course, having a par of 36—36—72, is said to be in pretty good shape. Winter rules will prevail.

Star Hurdler Is Badly Cut; He Leaped Without Looking

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP).—Pursuing burglars in a nightmare, Phil F. Cope of the University of Southern California, co-holder of the world's record for the high hurdles, leaped through his bedroom window this morning, severely cutting himself.

Forty stitches were required to close gashes on Cope's right hand and both his feet. Surgeons said he would be in bed for ten days but expressed hope his track career would not be curtailed. Cope is a senior.

"Thank goodness it wasn't a second story window," said his wife.

Cope said he dreamed that burglars were peeping through his window. He dashed from bed and cleared the ground floor window in championship style. He awakened simultaneously with the crash.

Cope won the high hurdles championships at the 1935 I. C. A. A. A. meet, and toured Europe that year with an A. A. U. team. His mark of 14.2 for the 120-yard high hurdles was recognized as a tie with the world's record.

Tournament Lead Taken by Guard

El went out for the final round with the wound wide open. Despite his handicap, he finished in a blaze of glory which brought him a well-earned unanimous decision.

Glenn Drake, of the Terminal Y. M. C. A. and Dave Schlaifer, of the Jewish Community Center, staged a two-man Spanish revolution in the 147-pound division. With an edge in boxing ability, Schlaifer piled up an early lead which was wiped out after he had punched himself out against his sturdy opponent. Drake was awarded a split decision at the finish.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

The mystery of Catholic University's failures on the football field this year has been no mystery at all to Coach Arthur (Dutch) Bergman, who, since the outset of the season, has been cautioning over-enthusiastic C. U. supporters to expect no great deeds from his Cardinals.

POVICH.

But Bergman's warnings apparently fell upon deaf ears. C. U. fans, quite carried away by the impressive triumphs of last season when the Cardinals lost only one game and then capped their campaign with a sensational victory over Ole Miss in the Orange Bowl, visioned only an even more sensational season in 1936, what with Bergman's backfield virtually intact.

"Yes, we had all our ball carriers back, except one man who never carried the ball much anyway," said Bergman yesterday, "but that was the rub. Pete Dranginis was no great hand at lugging the ball, but we probably miss Dranginis this season more than we do any other man. He was the kind of a quarterback that made life happy for a coach. Out there calling the plays, Dranginis was virtually a coach on the field. I knew only too well that we'd miss Dranginis."

Three defeats on successive Saturdays—by Mississippi, Loyola and West Virginia Wesleyan—have cost the Cardinals considerable of the popularity they won last year and C. U. supporters are rankling with misplaced faith. But Bergman, sitting on the bench each Saturday, could only yearn for such as Dranginis and three men who were graduated out of last season's line.

"It was all very absurd to reason that we would have another fine season because we had our best ball carriers back and lost only three regulars out of our line," said Bergman. "On the face of that sort of a situation, a team may not be badly hurt, but the fact is that we were virtually wrecked by the loss of four men.

"When Bill Lajousky, Ed Karpowich, George Mulligan and Dranginis reached the end of their playing careers, C. U. lost the four men who meant more to us than any others on the team. We had a fine team last year because of them. Dranginis represented the brains, and the others were almost wholly responsible for the fine line we were able to present. When they left, they took virtually all the speed out of our attack, and defense, too.

"Losing a fellow like Lajousky can't be laughed off by any coach. He was a 10-second guard, mind you, who I can't remember as ever being hurt. Karpowich at tackle was probably the greatest tackle I ever saw in 20 years of coaching, and Mulligan, at end, was head and shoulders over any other end in Washington.

"Unless you're a head coach perhaps you don't realize how much three men like those three in the line mean to a football team. Why, they were the guys who were always making the tackles on punts and kick-offs, who were clearing the way for our backs, hitting the other guys so hard they fumbled, intercepting passes and generally raising hell with the opposition.

"A coach appreciates those kind of fellows, perhaps a bit more after they've gone, but the public doesn't get the same slant. They see a raft of substitutes on the sidelines and think we can replace 'em. You can't do it, unless you're lucky, and we didn't have that great good fortune."

The lucky holders of the winning daily-double tickets which paid $206 at Pimlico yesterday are, paradoxically, entitled to ask: "Whaddayamean, lucky?"

Because a straight $2 parlay on the two winners which figured in the double would have netted each better $575, or more than twice as much as the daily double returned.

When Fervid, a 20-to-1 shot, romped home in the first race and Sir Kai, an 11-to-1 shot, completed the double in the third, the combination paid only 103 to 1, in contrast to the 236 to 1 that a straight parlay would have netted.

Thus was borne out a race track rule that has become axiomatic: Don't hook up the long shots in the daily double—parlay 'em. The favorites? Yes, they should be played in the daily double, not parlayed.

Browns' Sale Put To League Today

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP).—American League club owners have been summoned to a special session here tomorrow to consider the purchase of the St. Louis Browns by a St. Louis syndicate headed by Donald L. Barnes.

Sale of the Browns' franchise by the Phil Ball estate virtually has been closed, but waits the approval of the American League and the courts. The syndicate must convince the club owners that there are no entangling alliances existing with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rumors have linked the Cardinals with the deal because of the prominent part played by Branch Rickey, business manager of the National League club, in the negotiations.

Princeton, Yale, Army Top Big Georgetown Court Schedule

An 18-game schedule, featuring contests with Princeton, Yale, Army, Syracuse and Maryland, in addition to the regular Eastern Intercollegiate League games, which should test the mettle of Georgetown's 1936 basketball team, was announced last night by Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics.

The card is one of the best ever arranged for a Hilltop quintet, with 16 of the games topnotch attractions. Only the curtain-raiser with Western Maryland and Loyola (Baltimore) games can be regarded as breathers, and these schools are reported loaded to the hilt with good basketball talent this season.

The Hoyas have been singularly honored by being booked with New York University in the feature of a double-header to be played at Madison Square Garden, New York, December 30. Long Island University, rated one of the East's most formidable quintets last winter, and Stanford University are scheduled to play the preliminary game.

After the inaugural Georgetown will not appear on its home court again until January 18, when it engages Pittsburgh here. All but seven games will be played away. Its first three league games, with Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Temple, will be played on foreign courts. The annual duel with Maryland is listed for College Park on February 20.

The complete schedule:

December 14, Western Maryland, at home; 16, Princeton, at Princeton, N. J.; 30, New York University, Madison Square Garden, New York.

January 4, Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh; 7, West Virginia, Morgantown; 13, Temple, Philadelphia; 18, Pittsburgh, at home; 20, Loyola (Baltimore), at home; 29, Temple, at home.

February 3, West Virginia, at home; 10, Army, at West Point; 11, Yale, at New Haven; 13, Syracuse, at Syracuse; 19, Carnegie Tech, at home; 20, Maryland, at College Park.

March 2, Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh; 3, Penn State, at State College; 13, Penn State, at home.

Olson, Robert In 'Title' Bout Tonight

Garibaldi Wrestles Katan in Semifinal; Conto to Meet Piers.

Monsieur Yvon Robert, who was headed for a life in the Royal Northwest Mounted Police Corps before he took up rassling, will risk his world heavyweight title tonight when he tangles with one Capering Cliff Olson at Joe Turner's Arena.

For Yoompin Yvon it is just another match that must be over in time for him to catch the 11:24 train to the next town. But for Capering Cliff it is the realization of a dream that started nearly two months ago.

Away back at the beginning of the indoor season Capering Cliff set his heart on a title match. In order to gain that point a rassler's gotta cut a swath in the ranks of the elite. He must gain decisions over at least one of the Duseks and the other trite and true ruffians.

Just to assure himself of a title shot, Capering Cliff not only beat Ernie, the toughest of the Duseks, but had the audacity to square off with Rowdy Rudy Dusek, reputedly the brains of the rassle racket in this section.

Olson attributes his success to the sensational flying buck, wherein he hurls himself sidewise at his opponent, while Robert specializes in a unique conglomeration of armlocks and somersaults, which he sees fit to call the Carpet Beater.

Semifinally, Growling Gino Garibaldi encounters Journeyman Jawn (the Grikk) Katan. In the prelims Harry Piers tackles Monie Conto. Ed Meske entertains George McLeod and Matros Kirilenko has a business appointment with Dr. Karl Sarpolis.

Rosslyn's Girls Defeat Beer Pin Team

The pace-making Rosslyn quintet continued its mad dash toward the Ladies District League bowling championship last night, winning all three games from National Beer for its seventeenth victory in 18 games. The winners' best game was 388 and their set 1,650.

Pauline Ford featured Highway Engineer's odd game decision over Georgetown, turning in a brilliant 158 game, two pins short of Lorraine Gulli's season record score. Pauline's chances of topping the mark were lost when she missed a single pin spare in her final frame. In the other matches, Temple, Convention Hall and R. E. A. Cleaners each gained odd game victories over Swanee, Lucky Strike and Arcadia, respectively.

New season records in every department were chalked up in the Petworth League last night, Brotman's Market rolling a 597 game and 1,744 set in whitewashing Soller's Plumbers. Louis Ruche of the Marketmen spilled the maples for a 171 game and 416 set. Petworth retained the No. 1 position with two wins over Schaeffer Motor Co. . . . John Perry's 155 game and 399 set was high in the C. & P. Telephone League . . . Technical Staff No. 1 retained its slim lead in the Ladies Commissioner & Miscellaneous League by downing General Counsel No. 1 twice . . . Mabel Kellogg's 129 game and Anne Williams 342 set featured the scoring in the Eastern Star Ladies League . . . Jim Hayden had a 141 game and American Security & Trust Co. an even 600 game to annex honors in the Bankers League.

Western Maryland Faces Eagle Eleven

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., Nov. 11.—With the ranks of its varsity sadly depleted by injuries, Western Maryland will face one of its toughest opponents Saturday, when the Terrors encounter Boston College in the Hub City.

Coach Charley Havens of Western Maryland will be forced to juggle his line-up again this week in an effort to get from his weakened squad a combination that can play the Eagles to a standstill.

Last week, with three of the Terror aces out of the line-up, Havens was forced to present a makeshift line-up at Albright. Al Lutt, a tackle, played the whole game at guard, and Joe Uvanni started at fullback in place of the injured Cliff Lathrop.

The Terrors, after being outplayed the first half by Albright's Lions, found themselves in the third quarter long enough to shake Frank Sadowski loose on an 80-yard run for a score, but could do no better than gain a 6-6 tie with Albright.

2 St. Albans Grid Teams Beat Landon, 27-7, 7-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Nov. 11.—Warning his charges against overconfidence, Head Coach Jo-Jo Lawler today drilled his Mount St. Mary's football squad for their game here Saturday with Gallaudet College of Washington, D. C.

"Merely because we have been installed as a favorite is no reason why we should look lightly toward Saturday's game," Lawler told his men.

The Mountaineers emerged from their impressive victory over Washington College last Saturday without injuries. All disabled members of the squad were in uniform today. This included Jack Bubrick, a guard who was out of action last week.

Following Saturday's encounter the Mountmen will rest until Thanksgiving afternoon, when they will oppose Western Maryland in their final game of the season.

G.W. Freshmen Meet Temple's Tomorrow

George Washington University's freshmen, best yearling eleven the Buff and Blue has boasted since 1929, makes its only local appearance tomorrow night in Griffith Stadium against its strongest opponent, Temple University's frosh, at 8 o'cloc'.

Conqueror of Western Maryland Freshmen last Saturday, 59-0, Coach Jean Sexton's team has attracted much attention. Seven or eight of the yearlings are considered likely varsity performers for 1937, among them Billy Richardson, Central High's all-high halfback of last year.

Richardson's backfield support is supplied by Quinn Collins, quarterback, and former captain of St. George's High, Chicago; Jerry Noonan, fullback, who captained Roosevelt High in New York City last year, and Ralph Zelaska, halfback, who captained Monessen (Pa.) High and won a place on the all-star team of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

Charlie Quatse, center from Greensburg, Pa., is a brother of Jess Quatse, all-American at Pitt several years back. Wilbur Saeger, who weighs 240 pounds; Bill Shumpes, Allan Hurd and Bill Hoagland are a quartert of sturdy tackles of whom much is expected in varsity competition next season. The guards, Phil Chimento, Lindsey Gordan and George Strecker, are the best freshmen prospects in their positions G. W. has had in a decade.

Temple's Freshmen have defeated Bucknell's frosh, who previously walloped one of the finest Penn State freshmen outfits of recent history.

Buddy Scott Faces Williams in Natural

One of the best local naturals of the season will hang in the balance in a pair of six-round preliminaries to the Howard Scott-Pete Mascia main event at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

The principals in the interesting bout which is gradually coming to a head are Buddy Scott, recently imported from Texas, and Charley (Hobo) Williams, a roving mitten manipulator. They will be matched with the best opposition available and if they continue to look as good as they have in previous bouts, will be tossed together in a week or two in the top spot.

Buddy has yet to lose a local bout and seemed destined to become cock of the walk until Williams popped into the scene.

Alexandria Signs Meglen for Pro Tilt

Joe Meglen, fullback and co-captain of last year's Georgetown eleven and until recently a member of the Patterson Pros of the American Association, has been signed by the Alexandria Celtics and will play against Washington Sunday when the teams meet in a Dixie League engagement. The kick-off will be at 2:30 o'clock at Griffith Stadium.

Meglen's last appearance here was early in October, when he performed with the College All-Stars against the New York Giants. He was one of the collegians' outstanding backs, getting off several long punts of the variety that made him one of the Hoyas' most valuable men last year.

Gevinson to Make Pro Debut Nov. 23

Lou Gevinson, foremost amateur boxer of the city, who recently retired from the simon-pure ranks, will make his professional debut in a six-round preliminary bout on the card to be presented Monday, November 23, at Turner's Arena, it was announced last night.

Gevinson's opponent will be a Baltimore boy, answering to the name of Schaeffer, who defeated Doug Swetnam, another District fighter, a couple of weeks ago in Baltimore.

Jaspers Picked To Beat Hoyas Saturday

New York Writer Claims Manhattan to Be G. U.'s Toughest Foe.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

No less an authority than Jimmy Dooley, football expert for the New York Sun, predicts defeat for Georgetown when the Hoyas invade Brooklyn Saturday for their annual game with Chick Meehan's vastly improved Manhattan eleven. He should know something about the Jaspers, having followed them throughout the season, covering all their games for his paper.

Here's what he says about Saturday's game:

"The Jaspers are working industriously these days in an effort to be at the peak Saturday so as to end Georgetown's winning streak. The chances are they will succeed. Meehan's line has improved with every game, and looked strong and aggressive even in defeat. Potentially the Jasper forward wall is one of the strongest in the East, and the only thing that prevents it from being in the same class as Fordham, Purdue and Pitt is its occasional lapses into lethargy.

". . . No team on the Jaspers' schedule, including Holy Cross and Detroit, had or has a right to trim them. Manhattan has more dynamite than any team in this section with the exception of Fordham. Its forwards are big, game and fairly fast. Its backs are hard runners, good tacklers and well-poised players.

Strongest Foe Yet.

". . . Georgetown knows it is facing the strongest team it has run into to date."

Righto, Mr. Dooley, Hagerty and the boys know they are running into trouble, but don't be too hasty in handing over the palm to the New Yorkers. Georgetown, too, has a big, tough line and fast, smart, capable backs.

Because they are just a wee bit leery of Catawba, George Washington's coaches will start their best team against the little North Carolina aggregaion Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium. Capt. Frank Kavalier, who was injured before the start of the season, will be available and has been assigned to a halfback post, replacing Herb Reeves who, in turn, will take Jay Turner's fullback position.

The line will be comprised of Holt and Hanken, ends; Prather and Rebholz, tackles; Weinberg and Renzaglia, guards, and Haringer, center. This is the strongest line the Colonials boast, and the fact that it is starting is adequate proof of their high regard for the opposition.

Head Coach Jim Pixlee has no data on Catawba, but from play-by-play accounts of its last game knows it is one of the trickiest teams his boys will face this year. Against Appalachian last week Catawba used a double reverse ending in a lateral to Charley Clark, who dropped back and shot a forward pass downfield to a waiting end. Stuff like that means only one thing for G. W.—trouble.

One of the South's most highly publicized and respected ball-carrying rookies will be on exhibition at College Park this week-end when Maryland entertains V. M. I. in its home-coming game. He is Andy Trzeciak, sensational triple-threat sophomore who has just returned to the line-up after a period of enforced idleness because of injuries.

Other stars who will be in the Cadet line-up are Oscar Saunders and Bud Kovar, both rookies, and Billy Roberson and Jim Beard, lettermen who have played prominent roles in V. M. I.'s campaign.

North Carolina State's football squad will not be without moral support when it hooks up with Catholic University at Brookland in the Cards' home-coming game, for the school's 60-piece band is expected to make the trip for the fray.

An elaborate program has been arranged for rthe old grads, starting with the Freshmen vs. Mount St. Mary's Frosh game at 10 a. m.

Sutherland Hoping to Wear Nebraska Down

Pittsburgh, Nov. 11 (AP).—Coach Jock Sutherland and 34 of his Pittsburgh Panthers were en route tonight to Lincoln, Nebr., where they will meet Nebraska's Huskers on the gridiron Saturday.

Sutherland said he believes the Nebraskans have the edge in offensive strength, but that he hopes to wear them down by using two or more teams.

The Panthers left Bill Stapulis, their fullback, at home to nurse a shoulder injury and the absence of Bill Glassford, also injured will see only five who played against Nebraska a year ago in Pitt's starting line-up.
